French Launch Drive to Crush Meuse Salient; Nazis Open Attack on Antwerp; Brussels Falls; Nation Lines Up Behind U. S. Defense Program

Leaders of Both Parties, Business and Industry Back Plans for Security; Senators Boost Army Fund

(Additional Defense Stories, Pages 2 and 3.)
(See "Time in Order to Arm," by Walter Lippmann, Page 7.)

Official, political and industrial America joined hands yesterday in an extraordinary drive to arm the Nation as Congress sped the huge Army defense program over its first committee hurdle.

There were these swift-moving developments:

1. Only 24 hours after receipt of the President's plan, the Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee approved the $732,000,000 emergency fund asked for the Army and even added $50,000,000 not requested to bring the Army to full peacetime strength.

2. An unprecedented peacetime defense coalition formed quickly behind the President with the pledged support of former President Herbert Hoover, former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas; Col. Frank Knox, Thomas E. Dewey and Republican leaders in Congress.

3. American aircraft manufacturers heard the President's call for a 50,000-plane annual production capacity and arranged to confer Monday with Army and Navy officials on coordination of efforts.

4. The President pledged industry that Federal financial assistance, largely through the RFC, will be mobilized to help finance the defensive industrial expansion. The President voiced the hope that idle private capital will go to work in aviation and machine tool plants.

5. Col. Knox, Landon's 1936 Republican running mate, was authorized by Mr. Roosevelt to plan organization of nine camps to train an estimated 10,000 additional civilians as airplane pilots, providing a huge reservoir of trained manpower for the future air fleet.

6. Bernard N. Baruch, World War chairman of the War Industries Board, suggested that the President be given emergency power to suspend the Sherman antitrust act when necessary to speed factory production for national defense.

7. Heads of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. said they would cooperate in the defense program, but would guard social legislation and civil liberties.

8. The President abandoned plans for a trip through the West this summer, because of the war situation.

Dies Hits Fifth Column

9. In the House, Chairman Dies, of the special House Committee on Un-American Activities, received an ovation after calling for legislation to stem the threat of an American "fifth column" movement. Dies said money on defense will be wasted if America fails to deal at once with Nazi and Communist infiltration into key industrial positions.

10. At the White House, the President discussed preparedness plans with Gen. John J. Pershing, 79-year-old wartime commander of the A. E F., who feels that America's existing war arm is weaker than in 1917.

11. For three hours the President then reviewed defense plans with members of his Cabinet. They left the conference tightlipped on the European crisis.

12. Asserting that "this program will not be hampered by lack of funds," Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, conferred with the President, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and Senate Minority Leader McNary.

13. As war industries pledged their cooperation, President H. W. Prentis, jr., of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared for a policy of "no profit in war."

14. The possibility of the Government building and owning plane and munitions plants, to be privately operated, was discussed at the White House.

15. Mr. Roosevelt said that new aviation construction facilities should be located between the Alleghany and Rocky Mountains, away from the vulnerable seacoasts, where the industry now is largely centered.

16. It was revealed that funds have been included in the extra Navy program for recommissioning of 35 more World War destroyers, laid up for years.

Americans in Genoa

Genoa (Saturday), May 18 (AP). Two thousand homeward-bound Americans, mostly from Hungary, Yugoslavia and Rumania, poured into Genoa last night, and today. About 1,200 expected to sail today on the liner Washington, which has converted its salons into dormitories to accommodate the crowd. A thousand more are expected to sail later on the Rex.

Admiralty Barricaded

London, May 17 (AP).—A barbed wire barricade today was thrown around the gray stone Admiralty Building, nerve center of the British Navy. Soldiers guarded the entries.

It was assumed to be a part of the "at the ready" plan instituted to guard against Nazi parachutists.

A night and day military guard also was established about Broadcasting House, home of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Soviet Move Reported

Stockholm (Saturday), May 18 (AP).—The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen reported today from Moscow that it is rumored there that the Russian government had made representations to Berlin in the interests of preserving Yugoslavian neutrality. The rumor was that a Yugoslav representative paid a visit yesterday to the office of Premier Molotoff.

Gallup Poll: "Will U. S. Enter the War?"

"Do you think the United States will go into the war in Europe or do you think we will stay out?" Three times in recent months the Gallup Poll interviewers have asked American voters this question. Tremendously significant is the current answer, and the trend it discloses. You'll find it in the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

Rome Press Pushes Attacks on Allies, Hails German Gains

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 17.—The violent Italian campaign against Allied contraband control apparently bore fruit today as the Italian liner Rex, eastbound from New York, passed Gibraltar without being stopped.

The Italian Line reported that the eastbound Conte di Savoia had passed Gibraltar earlier in the day, but did not specify whether it, too, had been exempted from the customary British search.

That anti-Allied feeling persisted, however, was indicated when Lionel Green, a New York photographer, was attacked by Italians who objected to his photographing the Hotel Eden, from which the nameplate has been removed.

[Anthony Eden was the leading figure in the imposition of sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian conquest, and his appointment as British war secretary last week raised no cheers in Italy.]

Green said the Italians asked him if he was English. When he replied that he was American, they tried to smash his camera, but did him no

Jittery Traders Unload; Stocks Drop $2 to $9

Reports of smashing German victories yesterday drove down the prices of stocks, bonds and commodities, wiping out recoveries chalked up Thursday on President Roosevelt's defense message.

On the New York Stock Exchange, the week's downward spin in price levels made it the worst week since July, 1933, when the pre-NRA speculative bubble burst and all issues plummeted to deep lows.

Heavy selling in the final hour put the ticker minutes behind and drove big board stocks down from $2 to $9, involving such issues as Bethlehem Steel, duPont, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and United Aircraft. The bond and curb markets likewise sagged.

Staple foods and key industrial raw materials on the commodities markets reeled under a wave of liquidation, set off by the possibility of a German victory and reports of Nazi successes along a wide front.

Word Is 'Stand or Die,' Gamelin Tells French

British Admit Loss Of Brussels; Position Is 'Extremely Grave'

By Edwin Stout,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 17.—British troops withdrew tonight to the west of Brussels, occupation of which was announced by the Germans, while Dutch and French forces abandoned the Netherlands islands of Beveland and Walcheren, among the last of the Dutch fronts of resistance to the Nazi invaders.

Disclosure of the withdrawal from Brussels was made in a brief British war office communique following an appeal by an official source to Britons to keep "stout hearts and cool heads" in the face of German successes in Belgium and the deeper drive into northern France.

Abandonment of the Dutch islands in Zeeland Province was decided upon after heavy bombardment by German planes and artillery, it was reported here.

King George VI, keeping closely in touch with the great battle in France and Belgium, studied maps at the war office and later received Prime Minister Winston Churchill at Buckingham Palace.

The war office declared there was "no question of a collapse or break-

Poilus Attempting To Stand Fast in Sambre-Meuse Valley

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 17.—The French armies, under orders from Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin to "die on the spot rather than give further ground," battled a massive German tank drive into northern France tonight in a clash described by the high command as "a veritable melee."

Adolf Hitler's gray-green fighters carried their week-old offensive on the Western Front to a peak during the day with violent blasts both in Belgium and France in a desperate effort to drive home a decisive victory.

The German thrust through Belgium struck straight at Brussels, from which King Leopold's government fled to Ostend, on the North Sea.

[The German high command announced its troops entered Brussels at nightfall after breaking through Belgian and Allied lines defending the Belgian capital. It did not, however, state the extent of the occupation.]

The drive into France was directed through a pocket carved out of the battle-scarred northern plains.

"Advance or Die"

"The fate of the Fatherland, that of our Allies and the destiny of the world depends on the battle in course," Gen. Gamelin, commander in chief of the Allied forces, said in an order of the day.

"English, Belgian and Polish soldiers and foreign volunteers are fighting at our sides. British aviation is engaged to the full like ours.

"Any soldier who can not advance should die on the spot rather than abandon that part of native soil confided to him.

"As always at grave hours of our history the word of the order

Blonde Parks Baby With Maid, Vanishes At Dupont Circle

Police last night were seeking "a pretty young woman with long blond hair and a recent permanent wave," who, yesterday, left a 7-week-old girl baby with a colored woman at Dupont Circle and disappeared.

Nola Simpson, colored, of 2623 Greens Court northwest, employed as a maid at 1303 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was accosted by the woman, about 23, on Connecticut avenue near Dupont Circle. The woman asked her to hold the baby while she made a telephone call.

When she failed to return, the maid gave the above description and turned the baby over to Private M. C. Barco, of Third Precinct, who passed on patrol. Barco took it to his precinct station, where it was turned over to the Woman's Bureau and later sent to Gallinger Hospital.

The baby wore a white dress, trimmed in blue, pink bootees and white rubber pants and was wrapped in a pink blanket.

Planes Battle Great Horde Of Nazi Tanks

Some Are Monsters Of 35 Tons; 2,000 May Be Involved

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday) May 18.—Five tank divisions, each with 400 of the devastating war machines, some of 35 tons, are being used by the Germans in the Meuse salient.

Military experts here say the tanks are heavier and much more thickly armored than the Nazis used to crush Poland. Also, the inference is that they are of greater power and destructiveness than the Allies had been led to believe before Hitler unleashed them on the French.

These divisions, used with such crushing force in the piercing of the Maginot line extension, have more than matched the Allies' striking power to halt them.

Bombers Reply

Heavily increased Allied bombing fleets were the principal factor in checking the Germans yesterday, when they pushed the point of the Meuse pocket to within 100 miles of Paris.

News in Paris early today of the French counter-attack indicates that the Allied air assault is being still further increased.

Before the war, super-heavy armored tanks were the pride of the French army. They gave a good account of themselves when they first clashed with German tank divisions last Sunday and Monday at the beginning of the drive in the Meuse Valley.

But the Germans, apparently have supplemented their fleets of whippet tanks, about which the Allied armies knew, with much more powerful machines—and many of them.

The Germans depended almost solely on these tanks, aided by fighter planes guarded against Allied bombers, to drive their wedge into Rethel yesterday.

Allied Retreat Is Becoming Great Rout, Berlin Claims; Louvain and Some Namur Forts Taken, Germans Say

The War Today

FOLLOWING GERMANY'S SWIFT, FAN-LIKE drive to advanced positions from Antwerp to Sedan, French armies launched a fierce counter-attack early today. The launching, apparently in the Sedan sector, came with both Paris and the Channel ports in peril from German successes on the 115-mile front yesterday.

IN THE NORTHERN PART of the line they marched into Brussels as the Belgian government fled the capital for Ostend. They claimed capture of Louvain and Malines and they are knocking at the gates of Namur and Antwerp.

IN THE SOUTH, THEY had followed up their break in the Maginot Line extension at Sedan, by thrusting a deep pocket into France. The point of this pocket reached Rethel, only 100 miles from Paris.

THE ALLIES ADMITTED THEIR peril. Allied Generalissimo Gamelin called on his troops to "die on the spot" rather than yield another inch. In England, the government moved child evacuees from London away from the imperiled southeast coast. Officials urged the public to face a "grave situation" with "stout hearts and cool heads."

THE REST OF EUROPE is jittery, filled with rumors of war's spread, calling up new soldiers, watching frontiers—but, otherwise, still at peace.

Bulletin

Paris (Saturday), May 18 (AP).—Spurred by the order of Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin to "conquer or die," the French army unleashed furious counter-attacks today, seeking to draw a hangman's knot about the ponderous advance of heavy German tanks into northern France.

In wooded ravines and open fields of the sector bounded by Avesnes, Vervins, Rethel and Sedan the French closed in by land and air, trying to strangle the Nazi thrust west of the Meuse. The Germans had advanced daringly forward of their supply bases, which Allied planes bombed incessantly.

Reich Legions Gain From Sedan to Sea

By Ralph W. Barnes

Berlin (Saturday), May 18.—The Allied retreat on a wide front in Belgium and France before the onslaught of the German fighting machine is developing into a rout and debacle.

This, at least, was the jubilant Nazi claim here in the small hours this morning, after the German official news agency had announced that the Belgian cities of Louvain and Malines had capitulated, that German troops were marching into Brussels and that the whole Allied defense line in central Belgium, from Antwerp in the north to Namur in the south, was outflanked, hopelessly penetrated and crumbling.

Earlier yesterday, the supreme command at Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's headquarters "somewhere in the west" reported that, with their way prepared by devastating operations of the new "heavy artillery," the bombing airplane, German land forces have opened a gap 62 miles long in the extension of the Maginot Line between a point south of Maubeuge on the Sambre River, and Carignan, southeast of Sedan, and have penetrated through this region deep into French territory, driving all before them.

The march into Brussels is asserted to have followed the collapse of the Anglo-French defense south of Louvain. Earlier yesterday it was announced that the Belgian government had evacuated the capital.

Tanks Push Spearhead Toward Rheims

If the Nazis hold Brussels, German arms will have accomplished this feat in almost exactly half the time it took them to do it in the last war, 8 days instead of 16. In that earlier conflict they marched into Belgium August 4, and the capital capitulated August 20. The bomber and swift moving mechanized units which the invader now possesses explain the difference.

Though the exact depth of the German penetration of the "extended Maginot Line" in the Maubeuge—Carignan sector—is not indicated, hard-striking mechanized detachments, including tanks, are reported to be advancing like spearheads in the general direction of Rheims and points south of St. Quentin. Severe fighting was said to be in progress near Rethel and possibly exaggerated hints were dropped that "the sweeping break-through" had been carried at some points even to greater depths.

Hailed as a "major break-through along the Maginot defenses" (an extension of the Maginot Line), this drive was asserted to have completely flanked the remainder of the Allies' defense lines in Belgium, and to have made their retreat to the fortified frontier positions on either side of Lille inevitable. This was before the reports of the fall of Louvain and Brussels were issued.

A jubilant Wilhelmstrasse was predicting by midnight that the war would end "within six weeks" in a German victory, and some of the more enthusiastic Nazis talked of the German armies making their appearance before Paris within a few days. One German said:

"Now we are beginning to get some returns on our guns-are-better-than-butter policy."

Antwerp Forts Declared Flanked, Untenable

Even as early as noon yesterday a bulletin of the supreme command said that the northeast section of the fortifications of Namur had been captured, that German forces operating between Louvain and Namur had penetrated in force to a point south of Wavre, perhaps less than 20 miles from Brussels, and that strong pressure was being exerted on the Allied lines in Belgium at other points.

Presumably, the forces which have reached Brussels, if the Nazi claims are justified, are advanced mechanized detachments which came up from the region of Wavre, to the southeast. All the German reports

Over Our Shoulder

AN ADVERTISEMENT FOR THE SUNDAY POST

Not the Navy but the State Department is our first line of defense. Not the Army but the Justice Department is our strongest home guard.

At least, these are the opinions of many Americans, who admire the blows struck by Secretary Hull in the battle of diplomacy, who applaud the activities of the G-men in ferreting out members of any "fifth column."

The picture story of the Departments of State and Justice is given you in the Sunday Post's eight-page "Our Town In Pictures" section tomorrow.

Some of the things you'll see:

How to get a passport (but not how to get a world in which passports wouldn't be needed).

A tour through the FBI (but nothing the Gestapo would be interested in learning).

How career diplomats are trained (but no tips from Mary Haworth on acquiring a rich wife to pay the embassy bills).

The world's biggest law office (appropriately, the same page pictures the Bureau of Federal Prisons).

How reciprocal trade agreements are negotiated (but no pictures of ex-Senator Smoot's face when he reads about them).

A visit from a foreign diplomat (surprise!—it's one who actually has a country to represent).

White House Gratified By Cooperation

Hoover and Landon Favor Roosevelt's Defense Program

By Robert C. Albright

Key Republican leaders yesterday tossed partisanship overboard in an almost unprecedented armistice on the President's National defense program.

Former President Hoover and Alf M. Landon, titular head of the party, joined with active Presidential candidates like Thomas E. Dewey and Robert A. Taft, in statements supporting preparedness action.

White House satisfaction was immediately expressed in a statement of appreciation on Hoover's declaration and in an invitation to former Gov. Landon to lunch with the President next Wednesday.

Welcoming the proffered support, Stephen Early, White House Secretary, said it indicated National unity and called it "further indication that political differences are being cast aside in an emergency."

Congressional minority leaders previously had announced their support of the defense program in general, and Col. Frank Knox, 1936 G. O. P. Vice Presidential candidate, had carried to the White House their views of adjournment of politics on the defense issue.

Unhesitating in their rally to a program for defense, Congressional Republicans gloomily weighed the likely effect of Europe's sudden war turn and the armistice on defense on their coming campaign.

Some of these privately envisioned a G. O. P. campaign program almost identical with the Administration's on national defense, but stressing noninvolvement, sound financing of the program and diverting attention where possible to domestic political issues. Belief that the President will run was as general as the feeling that his handling of defense matters would help him.

Former Gov. Landon of Kansas, who with Knox has seen more closely eye to eye with the President on defense and foreign policy than many of his colleagues, inserted his indorsement of the Administration's defense plans in a speech delivered at Warrenburg, Mo.

"Leader of All the People"

Landon, who said "the deplorable condition of our national defense is almost unbelievable," spoke of "notorious friction in the War Department at the top," but said additional appropriations must be made available as quickly as possible. He declared a united Nation is "the big thing in any defense program," adding:

"The President in his splendid address to the Congress yesterday spoke as the leader of all the people. He is acting in the spirit of unity for which Americans have been waiting and in a spirit which will bring him united support in preparing our defenses. I pledge to support our President in his announced efforts to strengthen the Nation against attack and to continue to cooperate with him in all efforts for complete unity on foreign policy."

Former President Hoover, seldom in agreement with Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies, agreed that "our defense armament should be revised in the light of experience from this war" and declared "there can be no partisanship upon the principle of national defense."

Hoover said there were further things that should be considered, that due to the "fearful" burden on the people Congress no doubt "will examine every avenue of economy that does not destroy our ability to defend the Western Hemisphere from attack."

To arm "thoughtfully and scientifically" he said the experience of this war needs to be further observed and "undue haste would defeat its own purpose." But he said "that does not apply to the creation of facilities for production, which must be first in any event." He recommended that production be placed in the hands of a staff of tried leaders chosen from actual industrial production.

Dewey Urges Defense Board

New York District Attorney Dewey, also in New York, joined President Roosevelt "in the hope that our (military) needs can be filled without in any way interfering with the shipment of airplanes and supplies to nations which have contracted for them."

Dewey recommended establishment of a national defense board "completely removed from politis."

Informally, Dewey suggested that the so-called "blank-check" special fund of $200,000,000 should be "most carefully considered by Congress as to its purpose and effect."

In Chicago Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, added a word of support for the President's program, agreeing "that we must have completely adequate preparedness for defense at once to cope with any eventuality."

In Des Moines, Iowa, Wendell Willkie, utility executive and Republican Presidential "dark horse," agreed with the principles advocated in the President's armament speech, but said the New Deal's "continuous attacks on the American industrial system the last seven years" will hamper the drive to expand armament production facilities.

The Republican committee on arrangements, meanwhile, meeting in Philadelphia, has adopted a resolution inviting Hoover to address the Republican convention and named a new arrangements committee chairman.

Hoover similarly was invited to address the 1936 convention. Samuel F. Pryor, jr., Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, was appointed to succeed Ralph E. Williams, who died Thursday night, as convention chairman. Pryor, who lives at Greenwich, Conn., is assistant vice president of the American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co.

Jones-Wheeler Bill Denounced By Mylander

Plan Would Give U. S. Monopoly of Farm Credit, He Avers

By Hedley Donovan

Enactment of the Jones-Wheeler farm credit bill would leave the American farmer with no source of credit except the Department of Agriculture, a Senate Banking subcommittee was told yesterday.

Charles H. Mylander, vice president of the Huntington National Bank, Columbus, Ohio, and a director of the Federal Land Bank at Louisville, asserted that the Jones-Wheeler bill would make a "fiction" of the Federal Land Bank system.

"The country bank, the insurance company and individual who now is lending money upon the security of farm mortgage mortgages would be forced out of that business," he said. "When anyone has only one source of credit to which he may go he is at the mercy of the lender, and that is not a healthy condition in a democracy such as ours."

Mylander charged that the misfortunes of farmers in certain areas of agricultural depression are being used as a "cloak" for destruction of the entire system of "farmer-owned and farmer-operated credit agencies."

He denied charges that banking and insurance interests oppose the bill because it lowers farm loan interest rates.

"We oppose this bill," he said, "because the American Bankers Association desires that this country shall continue to have publicly chartered and Government-regulated, but privately owned, local banking institutions, and not that our people shall be compelled to apply to a system of Government-owned, politically controlled institutions whenever they need or desire credit."

Albert S. Goss, former Land Bank Commissioner, completed presentation of a detailed analysis of the bill, which he contended would destroy the cooperative character of the farm credit system.

The former commissioner, who was the fourth high Farm Credit Administration official to resign after merger of the agency with the Department of Agriculture, described previous testimony by FCA Gov. Black and Secretary Wallace as "very misleading."

Black had testified, Goss said that passage of the bill would mean an annual saving to the Treasury of $6,300,000 in reduced subsidies to the FCA.

Goss contended that on the basis of 1939 operations the farm credit system would have shown a loss of $23,000,000, instead of the $5,900,000 profit it made.

The system's income would be cut because of the reduction of interest rates on land bank and commissioner loans from an average of about 5 per cent to 3 per cent and the retirement of land bank stock under the bill, he said. This loss of income, he added, would greatly exceed the "apparent saving" to the Treasury.

Harrison Asks Postponement Of Defense Finance Action

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, after a round of Administration conferences yesterday, recommended postponement of the problem of emergency defense financing until the next regular or special session of Congress.

Harrison carried this advice to the White House and at the same time assured the President that the $1,182,000,000 emergency program "will not be retarded or embarrassed by lack of funds."

The Treasury, meanwhile, undertook a study to determine how far defense spending can be carried without raising the debt limit, floating securities or levying new taxes.

At an earlier press conference, the President said Federal financial assistance would be provided directly, probably largely through the RFC, to help finance the Nation's industrial expansion for defense. He voiced hope that idle private capital would fill the bulk of the plant expansion needs.

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones was called into White House conference and later told reporters, "there'll be no demand for plant expansion that we can't meet."

"We can do it," said Jones. "We'll give them whatever we've got."

Business Basis Only

Jones said R. F. C. loans for plant expansion would be made on a business basis only, without special favors.

In the absence of House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Doughton, Senator Harrison was called alone to the White House. He conferred as well with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Before presenting his recommendations to the President, he talked with Senate Minority Leader McNary, who agreed that defense financing plans should not be made hastily.

At a press conference, Harrison told reporters that no decision had been reached and what course is followed would depend on the outcome of Treasury studies.

"Whether we will decide to increase taxes, increase the $45,000,000,000 debt limit or float a special defense bond issue, will be determined later," he said.

Harrison said a simple resolution increasing the debt limit to $47,000,000,000 for example, would inevitably bring a demand for consideration of a tax bill at once and he doubted the wisdom of perfecting a tax bill in haste.

"If we could carry on safely until Congress meets in January, or even until a special session, if necessary, we would prefer to do so," said Harrison.

He said joint Congressional Internal Revenue Committee studies indicated revenues for the next fiscal year would exceed estimates by $402,000,000, a figure $52,000,000 in excess of Treasury estimates. This revenue increase, coupled with the $700,000,000 Government corporations are expected to turn back to the Treasury, he said should be sufficient to finance spending "possibly until February or March."

Horizontal Rise Considered

Before Harrison recommended postponement of the tax and debt-limit increase issue, an immediate 10 per cent horizontal tax increase is known to have been under consideration to finance the program. An excess profits tax, similar to the old wartime levy, also has been proposed.

Harrison declined to discuss taxes generally, saying he preferred "to wait for a meeting of minds." But he said he was personally opposed to an excess profits tax at this time.

"We want to encourage industry to build," he said, "and if we do that we will discourage them."

In the House meanwhile, Representative Boren (Democrat) of Oklahoma, introduced a resolution to provide for an issue of $2,000,000,000 of "preparedness bonds" to finance the defense program. The bonds would be sold in denominations of $5 and multiples of $5 and mature within ten years.

Defense Plea Gets Industry, Labor Support

Baruch, Prentish, Green Give Pledges Of Cooperation

Industry and labor, with one exception, peeled off their coats and rolled up their sleeves yesterday, ready to give the President a hand in speeding the Nation's defense.

Bernard M. Baruch, World War chairman of the War Industries Board, suggested in New York that Mr. Roosevelt be given emergency power to suspend the Sherman Antitrust Act if necessary to gear up factory production. He alluded to a recent Supreme Court decision that 12 oil companies violated the act in agreeing to control the price of gasoline, though the companies contended their price control was established in open cooperation with the Interior Department.

At San Francisco, H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, told 2,000 business leaders the association's policy would be "no profit in war." The association, he declared, approved an adequate national defense, but opposed any idea of going to war.

Green Pledges Help

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, pledged its cooperation with industry and with the Government to produce essential defense materials. He said the federation, however, would oppose any attempt to suspend wage-hour regulations "except if a great emergency arises."

The National Administration was invited to ask businessmen to help it solve economic problems by Charles R. Hook, chairman of the executive committee of the National Association of Manufacturers. Hook spoke before the Union League Club.

For its part in the preparedness program, the automotive industry centered at Detroit announced itself ready. Already prepared by more than $10,000,000 worth of "educational orders" from the War Department and as much again in foreign war orders, the huge industry stands ready to turn out firing pins or subchasers, gunsights or aircraft engines.

Lewis Asks Share for Labor

If the United States wants the cooperation of labor in preparing for war or fighting a war, labor must have a part in fixing national economic and political policies, John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, told the national convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, at New York.

Lewis demanded that the Administration reassure labor on four major points in the event of war: That present social legislation will be protected, that collective bargaining and wage-hour rights of war industries employes will be upheld, that labor will have a voice in determining national policies, that civil liberties will be protected.

Baruch's suggestion regarding suspension of the antitrust law, he said, was especially pertinent with respect to the aviation industry. This essential war activity, he observed, might be greatly hampered in its defense efforts by fear of violating the monopoly law under the Supreme Court's decision in the oil cases.

Green, assuring the Nation of the A. F. of L.'s readiness to throw its weight on the side of industrial preparedness, warned against a possible tendency to substitute semi-skilled or unskilled labor for skilled or greatly to increase the number of apprentices on the ground of a labor shortage. No such shortage exists or is threatened, he declared.

Dies Exhorts U. S. to Take Action Against 'Fifth Column'

Texas Says Communists Helped Nazis At Trojan Horse Work in Holland, Norway; House Cheers His Hour-Long Speech

The United States is wasting billions on battleships and warplanes if it fails to deal immediately with the threat of an American "Fifth Column," Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, warned yesterday.

Dies was given a standing ovation at the conclusion of his hour-long speech. All but a handful of his colleagues rose in their seats and heartily applauded the Texan as he left the well of the House.

Dies said his committee investigating un-American activities was ready to introduce legislation to safeguard the country's internal security, but he contended that the most pressing need was enforcement of existing law.

Laws on the Books

A majority of the Communist and Nazi sympathizers whom he claimed had filtered into key positions in industry, transport and communications, could be controlled through deportation, registration and income tax laws now on the books, Dies said.

The Texan said it was not generally known that Soviet partisans cooperated with the Nazi "Fifth Column" in smoothing the path of the German invaders in both Norway and Holland.

Meanwhile a Senate Judiciary subcommittee heard from Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, that "recent developments abroad" required immediate action to tighten immigration and deportation laws and protect Army and Navy morale.

Smith is sponsor of a bill, already passed by the House, which would impose heavy penalties on any person attempting to undermine the loyalty of Army, Navy or Coast Guard personnel; require deportation of aliens convicted of espionage or sabotage for a foreign government; require triplicate fingerprinting of aliens seeking entrance into the United States, and forbid the advocacy by citizens or aliens of violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Asked by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, whether the latter provision violated constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and press, Smith replied:

"I don't think so. If it does, we ought to change the Constitution."

Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, told the subcommittee that in several American ports "no naval vessel can be moored without a swarm of propagandists coming aboard and telling our fighting men they ought not to fight."

The finger-printing provision of the Smith bill would kill the "racket" by which foreigners now sell their names and quota positions to persons wishing to enter this country, Hobbs said, though "it doesn't get rid of the filth and trash that has been brought here already."

Called Attack on Rights

Mary E. Bodkin, representing the Descendants of the American Revolution, opposed the bill as "a concerted attack on the civil rights and liberties of citizens as well as aliens."

Dies, in his address before the House, recalled testimony before his committee that Communist sympathizers hold jobs in navy yards, the Merchant Marine and vital industries.

"We may as well be frank," he said, "because when you go into this question you will have to be prepared to face the C. I. O."

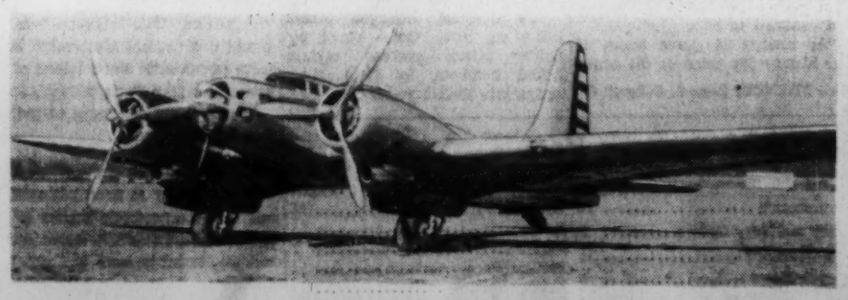
Demand on Lewis

Dies demanded that John L. Lewis inform leaders of the C. I. O. maritime and transport workers' unions that "there is no place on American soil for agents of foreign governments in control of vital industries."

The Dies Committee "has been handicapped in every conceivable manner," the chairman said, appealing for aid in his work from the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He asked the House, in meeting the "Fifth Column" menace, to "remember you are dealing with fanatics, ready to follow the dictates of foreign government at the threat of great punishment to themselves."

New Bombers to Strengthen Army Air Force



The War Department announced yesterday that deliveries had started on a new 13-ton, two-motor Douglas medium bomber. The ship is of all-metal construction with wing span of 92 feet, length of 58 feet and height of 18 feet. To be known as the B-23, the plane is a modification of its prototype, the B-18, and takes a crew of six

Senate Group Votes Record-Making Army Fund of $1,694,877,724 for Year

Committee Expands Plan Of President

Swift Action Taken To Improve Defense, Increase Strength

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Moving swiftly, a Senate subcommittee last night boosted President Roosevelt's emergency defense program $50,000,000 and voted an unprecedented peacetime outlay of $1,694,877,724 for the Army next year.

Chairman Thomas of the Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee announced the approval of the Army phases of the extraordinary arms plan, and revealed the group had gone beyond the President's recommendations to add 25,000 more troops to the Regular Army, raising it to full peacetime strength.

This action climaxed a day of rapid effort to expand the Nation's armaments. Developments were:

Aircraft Factories Planned

President Roosevelt revealed plans for the establishment of a number of aircraft factories, probably between the Alleghenies and the Rockies, to assist in increasing American warplane production to 50,000 craft annually. The plants would either be built by private industry or the Government, but would not be Government-operated.

The Allied purchasing mission announced orders will be placed here shortly for an additional $500,000,000 of latest American warplanes, which will raise the annual production rate well beyond the present 15,000-plane scale.

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, announced the President and the Army had approved a plan conceived by a group of citizens for training 10,000 young men as military pilots this summer. The program, it was said, closely parallels the "Plattsburg plan" of World War days for training officers.

Funds for reconditioning 35 old destroyers for active service with the fleet were revealed to be included in the $250,000,000 allotted for the Navy in the emergency defense fund.

Leaders Meet Today

The large outlay for the Army includes the $732,000,000 earmarked for the Army under the emergency defense program and $962,877,724 carried in the regular 1941 budget. The $250,000,000 in emergency funds for the Navy would be carried in a separate bill, probably the regular naval supply bill, which the Senate has asked be recalled from a joint conference.

Leaders will meet this morning to consider the $200,000,000 lump sum asked by the President in his message.

Chairman Thomas said the subcommittee had decided to increase the Regular Army to its full peacetime strength ofs 280,000 men after hearing testimony of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, in executive session yesterday morning, and had added $50,000,000 to provide for the enlargement. The emergency plan had already proposed boosting the Army from 227,000 to 253,000.

The group added $51,878,630 in funds budgeted by President Roosevelt prior to the present emergency, restoring virtually all the cuts made by the House in the regular appropriations. As approved by the House, the 1941 supply bill carried $784,999,094 in cash and $44,000,000 in contractual authority, to which the Senate group added $647,648,994 cash and $218,229,636 in authority to contract.

2,566 Planes Included

The military bill carries funds for purchasing 2,566 planes, including 166 replacement planes, 200 large bombers and 2,200 training craft to carry forward the expanded pilot training program. This would boost the Army plane strength to 7,900-1,900 beyond the present authorized limit.

As the Senate group was hearing Gen. Marshall outline the emergency plan, the latter's chief assistant, Brig. Gen. L. D. Gasser, appeared before the House Military Affairs Committee to urge speedy approval of legislation suspending the authorized plane limit, and several other statutory restrictions on the program.

He told the group the Army contemplated construction of a $30,000,000 smokeless powder plant with 200,000 pounds daily capacity. Seven hundred reserve officers will be called to active duty to command the additional troops to be recruited, Gasser said.

"Blank Check" Explained

President Roosevelt revealed the Government plans for setting up aircraft factories in the interior, where they would be safe from possible bombing raids, when asked to explain his request for a $200,000,000 "blank check" allotment in the special defense program.

He said the lump-sum appropriation would be used for things that cannot now be foreseen and as an example said it may be necessary this summer to request manufacturers making machine tools for foreign buyers to turn them over to the Government. "Bottlenecks" of various types may develop in carrying out the arms program which otherwise could not be overcome, he said.

The main purpose of the fund, the President continued, is to increase plane production capacity and facilities for producing other munitions. He said some 50 aircraft manufacturers have been called here Monday for a meeting on the matter.

Interior Sites Required

Other officials said the plan calls for establishment of perhaps 30 of the plants, each with a capacity of 100 planes monthly. Present aircraft manufacturers will be encouraged to set up the factories, aided by Reconstruction Finance loans. Should private enterprise not carry out the task, the Government is ready to step in.

Mr. Roosevelt said the manufacturers probably would prefer to put increased production facilities alongside their present plants which are mostly on the East and West coasts, but for strategic reasons the Government would require they be set up in the interior.

Asked by a reporter whether he felt the defense program is too large for industry to digest, the President condemned such suggestions as defeatism, and declared that if the United States were attacked we would have to do very much more. If we can't handle this program, he added grimly, we had better lay down our arms at the first threat to our security.

Won't Be Enlisted

Col. Knox, in announcing his air training program in Chicago, said the "Plattsburg aviation" camps will be set up in each of the nine Army corps areas after July 1. Experienced and amateur fliers between 18 and 35 years old, many from the CAA college program, would be enrolled. They would be trained in advanced military flying with the hope they can qualify for the Reserve Corps.

The civilian organization headed by Knox will provide the students and the Army will furnish camp sites, housing, cooks and instructors. Military discipline will prevail in the camps, but the enrollees will not be enlisted.

Arthur H. Ballantyne, secretary of the Allied purchasing mission, in announcing plans for buying an additional $500,000,000 worth of warplanes and engines, said the group's war buying had already passed the $1,000,000,000 mark.

Four thousand planes with accessories costing about $650,000,000 are already under contract, he said, while almost as much more has been spent for machine tools, munitions, electrical equipment, clothing, boats, horses, etc.

'The Tank and Plane Battle of the Meuse'

U. S. Can't Reach Plane Goal Till 1942, Rickenbacker Says

By Martin Kane
United Press Staff Writer

New York, May 17.—The United States can turn out 50,000 fighting planes a year, but not before the end of 1941, Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, American ace of another World War, said today.

"The President's idea is fine, but it has come five years too late," he said, racing across town in a taxicab to catch a plane. "I think we could get production facilities and personnel up to 50,000 planes a year by the end of '41, but I don't see how it is possible to do it before that time."

He estimated that such a production schedule would put 250,000 men to work in the actual manufacture of aircraft.

"On top of that," the Eastern Airlines general manager added, "we ought to have at least two pilots for every plane. That's the important thing—training pilots. It isn't like training fliers in the World War days, when 40 or 50 hours in the air qualified a man for the front.

"In this war a flier has to be an expert and a scientist because he is flying a meteor or a monster—a fighting plane that streaks along at 300 or 400 miles an hour or a huge bomber like our flying fortresses. Training such pilots takes months. It can't be picked up in a few weeks.

"One big problem is to multiply our air transport industry so that in peacetime we will be building a real foundation for defense which will be quickly convertible in emergency."

The cost of producing 50,000 planes a year, Rickenbacker asserted, would depend on the types made—about $50,000 apiece for the smaller aircraft.

"The big bombers we ought to have," he continued, "would be an improvement over our present flying fortress. They should have a 6,000-mile range with a good load of bombs so that they could go to Europe, Hawaii or South America and return without landing. They would cost $300,000 or $400,000 apiece. We ought to have 2,000 or 3,000 long-range flying fortresses."

Rickenbacker believes the United States should establish "master air bases" in New York, Miami, Brownsville, Tex., San Diego, Portland, Me., Alaska and at other points.

"The present situation of the Allies," he declared, "is due to lack of aviation. No army or navy now can win a decisive victory without a superior air force. It is now just a question of whether the Allies can prevent defeat long enough to attain superiority with our help.

"In my opinion, England is in for a terrific air bombardment when this present conflict on the western front settles down to what might be called more or less normal.

"Wave after wave of bombers are coming over to attack England's manufacturing centers, transportation centers, shipyards and, before they are through, they will be attacking so-called undefended towns—there's no such thing, except villages."

Pan America Joins in Protest At Invasion

Text to Be Released Today, Demanding Restoration of Law

By the United Press

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 17.—All 21 American republics have agreed to Uruguay's proposal for a joint Pan-American protest against Germany's invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, it was announced tonight.

The foreign office said agreement of all the republics had been received by the government of Panama, which, as clearing house for all inter-American matters related with the war, circulated this country's proposal.

Text of the protest will be published tomorrow afternoon in Panama City.

The United Press was informed reliably that the protest will include a call for "reestablishment of law and justice in relations between peoples." The text, it was reported, will be as follows:

"In accordance with the principles of international law and the application of resolutions adopted at continental conferences, the American countries consider unjustifie the cruel violation by Germany of the neutrality and sovereignty of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

"The American countries resolve to protest against military attacks on Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, at the same time calling for reestablishment of law and justice in relations between peoples."

Lindbergh to Talk On Air Defenses

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will discuss "The Air Defense of America" tomorrow from 9:30 to 9:45 p. m. in a Nation-wide broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System from Station WJSV here.

Exactly a year ago Col. Lindbergh told a Congressional committee that this country is far behind European nations in both types and numbers of planes. At that time he urged increased expenditure for research, stating that while the United States should not compete in quantity of planes, it should stay ahead of European nations in quality of aviation.

Germans Organizing Norway For Prolonged Military Rule

Economic Life of Conquered Nation Badly Hit by Trade Severance; Norse Bitter At Allies for Fiasco of Their Aid

The following eye-witness description give a pictureof conditions in central and south Norway following the German occupation.

By Francis McEachen
United Press Staff Writer

Norwegian-Swedish Frontier, Via Stockholm (Saturday), May 18.—I have just reached Sweden after a fortnight in central and south Norway and can report that the Germans rapidly are organizing Norway for prolonged military occupation.

The economic life of the country has been severely hit by the severance in former trade relations with Britain and the Americas.

I was in Oslo, the Norwegian capital, for ten days and saw thousands of marvelously equipped German soldiers arrive and depart for stations at various key points. Most of them went to posts on the Swedish frontier.

Norse Bitter at Allies

Many Norwegians to whom I talked grumbled against German rule but were even bitterer against Britain and France for not having given this country effective military assistance.

Germans and Norwegians working with them, were active everywhere. Many new air fields were being built. Roads, railways, bridges and harbors were being repaired at great speed. It was reported that many new forts were being constructed.

German artillery, tank units, armored cars and other forces were arriving in numbers which appeared far greater than necessary for purely defensive operations in Norway.

On the night of May 5, while I was sleeping in the Roeros Hotel, I was awakened by two German soldiers with drawn pistols and told I would have to go to Oslo. I left Roeros at midnight with three German soldiers and three Norwegian officers.

We reached Oslo at 7 p. m. May 6. All along the route I saw thousands of soldiers and labor front members at work repairing roads and other communications. They looked very fit and efficient. Officers and men were well garbed and appeared in high spirits. Their appearance was in contrast to that of the Norwegians who looked depressed and indifferent.

Interviewed by S. S.

I was taken to the Grand Hotel in Oslo where German S. S. Leaders interviewed me.

"Are you Jewish?" they asked. "Was your mother Jewish?"

They then questioned me at length about my opinion of various foreign countries, notably Russia. They also showed great interest in Sweden's Aaland Islands.

After questioning I was returned to my hotel. The Germans were courteous and friendly. They assured me I would be permitted to return to Sweden without hindrance and later I was.

Depositors were permitted to withdraw a maximum of 400 crowns monthly from their bank accounts if able to prove that the money was needed.

Col. Vidkun Quisling (who headed the pro-German regime in Oslo immediately after the German occupation) was living in the Grand Hotel. Norwegians told me that some pro-German Norwegians had been murdered by Norwegian patriots.

I counted 47 German transports which arrived in Oslo while I was there. They landed troops and equipment.

Defense Spending Won't Cut Relief Needs, Roosevelt Says

By John B. Oakes

Warnings were sounded yesterday both by President Roosevelt and members of Congress that the increased armaments program will not materially lessen the Nation's relief needs.

At the same time, in the face of Congressional moves to revive the PWA, the President asserted that a public works program would not provide for as many needy families on relief as the WPA.

The WPA disclosed that, "because of the serious world situation," it was prepared to give priority hereafter to projects contributing to the national defense.

Announcing this policy at a press conference, Col. F. C. Harrington, the work relief commissioner, said that Congress, in the interest of national defense, should eliminate that part of the WPA bill now pending in the House which would put a $50,000 ceiling on the Federal contribution to the cost of individual construction projects.

"The restriction would wreck the whole program," he declared, "in view of the fact that 80 per cent of WPA workers are enrolled on enterprises costing more than $50,000 each."

Asserting that Congress ought to pass the relief bill as soon as possible, the President told his press conference that the Nation cannot afford to cut more people off the rolls this summer or fall. He would like to see the amount increased, he added, to take care of all needy families.

The pending bill embodies the President's recommendation for $875,650,000 for WPA, to be spent, if necessary, in the first eight months of the fiscal year, beginning July 1. This would be almost at the same rate as the current year.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, after a conference at the White House, declared that rearmament "will help to some extent" but will not be one of the big factors in re-employment.

It was pointed out that skilled workers will be needed for the defense program, while the bulk of the unemployed are in the unskilled class. Furthermore, there is a large WPA waiting-list.

Rumanians Crack Down On Tourists

Order Strict Control Of Travelers; Italy Calls Nationals Home

By Eugen Kovacs.
Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, May 17.—The government tonight took severe steps to control the activities of tourists in the form of two decrees, one limiting the length of sojourn within the borders and another setting up concentration camps for those who are considered dangerous to the security of the state.

[The Associated Press reported Italy had ordered all her citizens to leave Rumania at once.]

The first decree makes it possible for foreigners to remain in the country only until their present visas expire, and bars almost all extension. All prolongations of visas granted before May 1 to foreigners without working permits are canceled, and their bearers will have to leave by May 31. Extensions granted since May 1, however, remain valid.

Hungarian Cabinet Meets

By the United Press

Budapest, May 17.—The Hungarian cabinet was understood to have met in emergency session tonight to speed up precautionary measures while usually reliable diplomatic sources reported Russia was putting pressure on all southeastern European countries and indirectly on the belligerents for maintenance of the Balkan status quo.

Military attaches of five legations disclaimed any knowledge of new German troop movements either in Slovakia or eastern Austria. They pointed out however, that presumably 15 to 20 German divisions still remained in the region of Krakow and eastern Austria, ready to move at a moment's notice.

Greece Calls Up 26-Year-Olds

Athens (Saturday), May 18 (AP).—The war ministry early today called to the colors the 1935 military class.

The class, composed of men 26 years old, will report May 25.

It was announced officially that the class, reported to number 60,000, was called for a month's training "in the use of new weapons."

Hitler's Army Weeks Ahead Of 1914 Time

Brussels' Fall in 8 Days Is 9 Fewer Than Kaiser's Feat

By the Associated Press

Germany's march into Brussels, Belgium's capital, yesterday cut almost in half the time in which the armies of Kaiser Wilhelm II accomplished the feat in 1914, while Nazi penetration to at least 35 miles beyond the French border was weeks ahead of the World War time table.

The Germans crossed the border into Belgium on August 4, 1914, and moved into Brussels August 20—on the seventeenth day.

Adolf Hitler's army required only eight days to enter Brussels.

The Kaiser's armies rolled on through Belgium and into France, but it was early September—a month after the war started—before the Battle of the Marne was fought and the Germans halted.

Today—eight days after the start of this blitzkrieg—the Germans are in Rethel, 35 miles south of Sedan on the French border, and are well ahead of the 1914 advance.

At the start of the World War, the French advanced into Alsace, then a part of Germany. This move soon was abandoned, however, and fighting continued in France.

They drove to within 20 miles of Paris before they were stopped in the first battle of the Marne, September 6 to 9, 1914.

Peace Council Opposes Loans To Belligerents

The Washington Peace Council last night adopted a resolution opposing America's participation in "the present imperialistic war" and went on record against loans to belligerents as "steps toward war," at a meeting of the organization at the Mount Pleasant Library. Nearly 300 attended.

Representative Lee Geyer, of California, told the group that the President's request for appropriations would be passed and he urged their support of such measures as the Vorhees bill which would take the profits out of war.

Tears of Belgian Peasants Salute British Hero of Dramatic Air Battle

Pilot Fights To the Death To Save Town

Farm Folk Believe He Sought to Avert Crashing in Crowds

By H. Taylor Henry
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the French Army, Somewhere in Belgium May 17.—Standing in front of a village church, I saw a squadron of some 30 German planes carry out a raid today.

In a nearby field, a farmer continued his ploughing.

About 10 miles away, the Germans started dropping their bombs. French and Belgian anti-aircraft guns opened up, adding puffs of smoke from their bursts to wisps of clouds.

Out from the west a French and British fighter squadron suddenly appeared, scattering the German planes. One plane dived toward our group, and we jumped to a stone wall for protection against the machinegun bullets which we expected to spatter against us.

The plane pulled out of the dive, however, and returned to the combat, which was now split up.

One of the aerial fights ended in death for an unidentified British pilot—but not before he had downed one of three German planes attacking him from the front, rear and above.

The British plane crashed about 4 miles away from us in a meadow. The Belgian peasants, with tears in their eyes, told us:

"The poor lad. He was a hero. He fought with his plane to the very end to keep it from falling into the center of our village. He lost his own life, but he saved many of ours."

In one French town on the frontier, the official death list of an earlier German raid stands at 37, of whom 15 were children. But one bomb made a direct hit on a cafe where several score others had taken refuge, destroying it. Those are not yet accounted for.

Witnesses of the raid said that after the Germans had dropped their bombs, they returned and machine-gunned crowds in the street who were trying to help the wounded.

is today: Conquer or die! We must conquer!"

French troops barring the way (here nine words were censored) took their stand around the Sedan-Rethel-Sambre triangle, driven 35 to 40 miles into France after the German break through the Meuse front.

The Germans attacked on the west side of this bulge around Avesnes and Vervins, roughly 10 and 15 miles from the Belgian border, striving to take control of the main northern highways.

German planes took over the task of protecting the armored advance forces and tangled with Allied aviation in innumerable dogfights.

British pursuits alone were reported to have downed 157 German planes over the Western Front sinces the German invasion started last Friday. Twenty-one of them were accounted for today.

French planes attacked the rear of the enemy motorized forces.

The Paris municipal council tonight issued a notice to its population, now included in the army zone, declaring "everything necessary has been done to assure you protection and supplies."

The notice urged the people to "be calm and resolute, as you have been in every tragic period of our history."

The French ministry of information also issued a warning that German agents were spreading false rumors in an effort to create a panic and urging civilians not to abandon their homes without formal orders.

Home Guards Formed

A government decree was published creating territorial guard formations to protect against "enemies behind the front," such as German parachute troops and "fifth columnists," for duration of the war.

The formation is open to all non-mobilized men 16 years of age or older to serve in their home communities under military orders.

While the Germans fought hard on the western edge of their bulge, other invading forces tried, without success, the French said, to widen it south of Sedan to Montmedy.

The French high command acknowledged that the fluid battle-front had spread back to the Sedan-Bethel-Sambre line yesterday, and that the Germans renewed their slashing attacks at dawn.

The battle of the Meuse-Sambre, begun as one of fixed positions on the Meuse River along the Belgian border, has become one of mobile fighting on the World War battlefields of northern France.

For the first time since springing their blitzkrieg methods on Poland, however, the German lightning columns encountered organized resistance behind the front, after breaking their way across the Meuse and through the Allied lines.

Lost Positions Weak

The chief war councilors of the Allies, Premier Paul Reynaud of France, Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain, Defense Minister Edouard Daladier and Commander in Chief Maurice Gustave Gamelin of France, conferred yesterday on measures to bolster their defenses.

A French calendar of the battle up to tonight follows:

Monday—The Germans, after rushing 60 miles through Belgium, reached the east bank of the Meuse and occupied French Sedan.

Tuesday—Three passages were forced by the Germans across the Meuse on the 55-mile front from Sedan north to Namur.

Wednesday—German tanks, fanning out from bridgeheads on the west bank of the Meuse, raced into the French interior.

Thursday—The German columns camped off the highways, awaiting reinforcements and supplies of food, gasoline and ammunition.

Friday—The German blitz patrols resumed their rush, but French and British air forces were counter-attacking and French infantry, armed with antitank guns, lay in ambush.

Overnight, south of Sedan, villages changed hands five or six times in violent, isolated engagements.

The German advance point, in the region north of Rethel, lies in the zone occupied by the Germans in 1914, just north of the Champagne plains and northwest of the bloody forest of the Argonne.

Exact lines tacked out by the German blitz battalions within the Sedan-Rethel-Sambre bulge are not known here, but their evident aim is, as Reynaud told the Chamber of Deputies yesterday: "To strike at the heart of France."

British Entry Into Narvik Believed Near

Stockholm, May 17 (AP).—Allied and Norwegian troops were reported tonight about ready to enter Narvik, Fair North Norwegian ore port, which has been besieged by the Allies since shortly after German troops captured it over a month ago.

Reports from the Narvik sector said French Alpine troops were pounding ceaselessly against confused German resistance in mountain areas east of Narvik.

(In London, the British war office said Allied forces continued their successful advance in the Bjerkvik area and have occupied the north shore of Rombaks Fjord. The communique added that parties of Germans were seen withdrawing eastward toward the Swedish frontier.)

(In Berlin, authorized German sources said English troops attempted to land under cover of night at Narvik, but were beaten off by German mountain troops. The English were said to have suffered heavy casualties.)

Refugees Flood Into Paris Like River of Misery

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 17.—Trains poured into Paris today bringing refugees from Belgium and the north. There were so many that nothing could be done for many of them and they are still waiting.

Twenty-five thousand reached the Gare de le Est alone. The Gare du Nord received so many that they could not even be estimated.

There are no words to describe such a plight as that of these poor humans, driven from their homes at an instant's notice with only a few belongings and having walked till they dropped and then suffered the terrible hazard of being machine-gunned by airplanes, and finally having traveled by slow stages packed in railroad carriages and some even in freight cars, halting on the way for hours at a time.

All efforts to handle them tonight proved ineffective. Among them were many sick and wounded (here 27 words were censored).

Thirty nuns arrived who had walked all the way from (here two words were censored) in Belgium to the French frontier. They had to take refuge from German machine-gun fire from airplanes on the way. When they reached France, they say, they were cheered and comforted by poilus who met them and put them in trains. (Here 11 words were censored.)

Schools were crowded and many of the barracks had been commandeered to house them. (Here 16 words were censored.)

The courtyard of the Caserne de la Tourelle, which is the headquarters of the Belgian relief, was packed with every conceivable type of vehicle which the refugees had used to make their journey. There were old-fashioned automobiles and motor trucks, vehicles that looked as though they had been constructed from pieces of tanks of the last war, carts that had been drawn by farm tractors and all kinds of private cars. Most of them had improvised awnings covered with field flowers, grass or branches of trees to serve as camouflage.

Many wealthy women, including Americans, were assisting in the work at the railway stations. Among them were Mrs. Spencer Eddy, Mrs. Gustav Porges, of New York, and Mrs. Elise Conklin, who was preparing meals and serving them.

An effort has been to bathe and give fresh clothing to every child, and the women of the American church have done splendid work in helping to provide for this.

The greatest need at present and in the weeks to come will be canned milk.

The American Club of Paris, working through the American relief clearing house, is sending a large number of private cars tomorrow to be on duty 24 hours. M. Clemente, commander of the Paris Post of the American Legion, issued an appeal for cars or drivers from the American colony.

London Admits Loss of Brussels

through" in the Brussels sector, where Allied and Belgian troops had fought bitterly to halt the Germans east of the city, in the vicinity of Louvain.

Necessary "Adjustments"

"During the night of May 16-17, certain adjustments to the front having become necessary, the B. E. F. was withdrawn to positions west of Brussels," it said. "This readjustment was carried out without interference."

The appeal to the public said, "Britain has faced tests like this before and can face them again."

Declaring that the future of Europe might hinge on events of the next few days, the official source added:

"There must, however, be no illusion about the fact we now are facing the first stages of the most tremendous battle in the history of the world."

It was explained that while the situation is grave, it is not irremediable, and that "shocks may occur, but the government is certain the people will prepare themselves to face any test with nerves of steel."

The day's developments brought Britain and France face to face with the most dangerous menace to their existence since the dawn of March 12, 1918, when the Germans smashed the depleted British Fifth Army—an attack which almost won the World War for the Kaiser.

King George VI drove from Buckingham Palace to the war office tonight, and spent an hour studying Western Front war maps.

Earlier the British, cautioning against false optimism, ordered 10,000 London children from havens on the east coast to safer places in Wales.

One bright spot in the dark picture presented to Britons was an account of achievements by British war planes which continued relentless bombing to hamper the advance of German columns.

The air ministry claimed the Germans had lost more than 1,000 planes since the invasion of the Low Countries began and credited its own airmen with inflicting tremendous damage on communications in western Germany, on mechanized columns, tanks, transport and gasoline reserves.

Deriding German claims of 1,462 Allied planes destroyed, the air minister commented that the German high command "must have published their own losses in error." The Allied losses, it added, were only a fraction of the figure reported by the Nazis.

Nevertheless, the air ministry's communique warned that Germany's reserves "are considerable and for the time-being at least are able to sustain their effort."

Allies Routed in Belgium, Paris' Fall Near, Nazis Say

would seem to indicate that Namur, with parts of its forts taken, is as much as surrounded and doomed to imminent capitulation.

[Allied reports indicated a battle raging for Namur.]

Following an announcement earlier in the day that the delta and insular region of Dutch Zeeland, northwest of Antwerp, was rapidly being subjugated, the official news agency reported tonight that, already hard pressed from the east and southeast, Antwerp was now faced by German forces on the north and northeast. Thus, the position of the defenders of the great Belgian fort has become untenable, it was asserted.

If, as the Nazis forecast, the whole Allied defense system in Belgium, flanked and pierced, crumples within a few hours or days, the Germans will be left free to carry out their revised Von Schlieffen plan, the plan under which they swung through Belgium into northwestern France in the first days of the last war.

A principal feature of that plan—badly executed in 1914—was a strong right wing. Under the program, this right wing was to swing in the manner of a door and strike like a hammer. The envelopment of Paris was envisaged.

Lowlands Bases for Drive on Britain

Now in the possession of Holland and expecting imminently the capitulation of those portions of northern Belgium which are still resisting, the supreme command will be in a position soon, Nazi military chiefs suggest, to assemble troops for a right wing which will make that of August, 1914, look like "a poor, weak thing."

Presumably, the intention is to begin the real onslaught of this right wing southward toward the Franco-Belgian frontier only when "the remains" of the Allied defense lines in central Belgium have been "cleaned up."

Once again emphasis is placed by the Nazi press on the importance of territory in the Low Countries as bases for the great air onslaught on Britain, which is openly discussed. Zeebrugge, on the Belgian coast, provided an important submarine base for attacks on British shipping in the last war. That and other points on the Belgian coastal area would prove even more valuable to the Germans today. By bomber, the distance to Dover from this area is 20 minutes or less.

Claiming that the test of battle had now proved the "immense superiority" of the German air force over that of the Allies, military authorities here asserted that up to midnight Thursday fully 1,500 Allied planes had been destroyed in one manner or another.

[Allies denied these figures as absurd.]

New appeals went out from Nazi headquarters to the Belgian people last night to follow the example of the Dutch and halt their "senseless fighting" in behalf of "the English."

"Realizing that they are being exploited by the English, the Belgians," wrote Der Angriff, "are now faced with the question: Why continue to fight since resistance seems senseless? Hundreds of thousands of additional Belgians are in danger of coming within the sphere of war. The Belgians no longer have any war aims."

Meanwhile, new substance was given to reports that "Switzerland may be next" by an editorial in the Voelkische Beobachter, which had a familiar ring. Charging that, with the Allies forestalled in the Low Countries, French opinion favors a flank attack at Germany through Switzerland, this official Nazi bulletin wrote:

Some Nazis Cautious on Claims

"This lets the cat out of the bag. We are faced with new plans by the Allies for spreading the war. But just as in the case of Belgium and Holland, from whose territory the flux into our Ruhr district was planned, these new black intentions will not prove a surprise for us. They will find us ready and under arms."

Citing especially the work of a motorized detachment under the command of First Lieut. Balk in the German advance southeast of Sedan, the supreme command reported that in this section alone 12,000 prisoners including two generals, and many guns, had been captured.

The German press is indulging in boasts that the break-through into France over a 62-mile front displays the weakness of the whole Maginot defense system. Thus, the Nachtausgabe wrote:

"Though the Allies claim the contrary, these positions are not a weaker extension of the Maginot Line. This break-through means virtually the destruction of the French defense system, whose various sectors from Basel to the North Sea are of equal value."

Despite the apparent steady sweep of the German offensive, certain sober observers here expressed the view that it is not all over but the Nazi shouting. They pointed to the tendency of an offensive to lose its momentum, and expressed the view that the Allies may prove able to deliver strong counterattacks against either side of the wedge the Germans are driving into France.

It would seem obvious, they said that the major counterthrust would be made by forces coming up from the strongly fortified zone of Verdun and the Argonne. They added that, of course, the Germans have made defense provisions against such counterattacks.

Reference was made by the supreme command to the continuous bombing and strafing operations of the German air force against "the rear communications" of the Allied forces, both in France and Belgium. The daily bulletin said that in these operations from the air, destruction has been rained on railway lines, highways and troop trains, and that many troop concentrations and marching columns had been broke up.

Louvain and Malines, it was officially stated, were taken only after severe fighting.

Oregon Vote Gives Roosevelt a Big Lead Over Garner

Portland, Oreg., May 17 (AP).—Returns representative of virtually all Oregon sections established a substantial margin for President Roosevelt tonight in his Democratic primary Presidential nomination contest with Vice President Garner.

One hundred and fifty-five out of 1,693 precincts showed: Roosevelt, 6,342 votes; Garner, 980.

Roosevelt's fourth test of strength in a primary involved ten delegates to the national convention.

Big Japanese Force Reported Crushed

Hongkong, May 18 (AP).—Central News, Chinese Government agency, announced today that the main Japanese force in central China had been crushed with the recapture of Tsaoyang, which had been a Japanese base in northern Hupeh Province.

The Chinese were said to have taken the city after day-long, hand-to-hand fighting. The Chinese earlier had reported recapture of the Japanese base, saying 7,000 Japanese were killed or wounded and others retreated southward "in utter confusion."

Roosevelt's Veto Seen For Navigation Bill

President Roosevelt will veto the $109,985,450 Rivers and Harbors bill, Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, was informed yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt has expressed objections to the majority of projects in the bill.

Guild Rebukes National Officers

Washington Newspaper Guild officials yesterday "rejected and condemned" opposition of the American Newspaper Guild's International Executive Board to President Roosevelt and his national defense program.

The local executive committee, by a vote of 5 to 2, rejected the recent "legislative position" of the national body. The national board proposed that the Guild national convention in Memphis July 8 "re-examine" a previous indorsement of a third term. It also expressed disapproval of Roosevelt's stand on pending legislation, including national defense.

The Washington resolution rebuked the national board for activity on matters not related to the Guild's function as a labor union.

McNutt Forecasts 'A Fresh Mandate'

Portland, Oreg., May 17 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt cautioned Americans of dangers to their liberties tonight. The Federal Security Administrator told a Democratic rally "our party will get, in November, a fresh mandate from the Nation to continue the struggle to strike off the manacles from the common citizens of America."

Ecuador Jails 8, Nips Revolt Plot

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 17 (U.P.).—A retired army major, two former soldiers and five civilians were arrested today by police after a five-day investigation of an asserted plot to overthrow the government and make Dr. Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra president.

Authorities learned of the plot on May 12 and immediately began a secret inquiry.

Economist Sees Peril of 'Reaction' In U. S. After War

The United State must have skillful "leadership" to avoid economic collapse in a changing order, David Cushman Coyle, economist, declared last night at a meeting of the Adult Education Association of the District.

To escape a "terrific reaction" after the end of the European war, this country must have skillful guidance to achieve "civilian improvements" and avoid dictatorship, the speaker declared.

The Italian Senate, which heard today a report that extraordinary military expenses would put the country 26,000,000,000 lire about $1,300,000,000) farther into the red this year, went into secret session, presumably to hear further confidential war reports.

Official enthusiasm ran high for German war successes. It was announced that Foreign Minister Ciano would go to Milan Sunday for a rally celebrating the signing last May 22 of the Italian-Germany military alliance.

The Vatican paper L'Osservatore Romano, subject of angry criticism in recent days by pro-German elements because of its war reports and comments, dropped political matter today.

Italians who read it to get a different slant on the news than they find in their own papers, discovered only the regular war communiques of the belligerents today.

The Fascist Catholic paper Lavvenire, however, broke the press' silence on the matter of Italian-Yugoslav tension, remarking:

"In the Balkans, Yugoslavia seems to be giving way to restlessness, which, if it has a precedent in the traditions of the tripartite kingdom, furthers neither Danubian equilibrium nor Mediterranean peace."

Although Yugoslavs have been manifesting fear of an Italian invasion, the subject has been ignored by officials and the press in Italy.

United States warnings to Americans to return home appeared likely to cause closing of the North American College for Theological Students here.

As another by-product of the European conflict, Italian importers began seeking tin, cocoa and oil seeds in South America to replace commodities formerly bought in the Netherlands East Indies.

Business circles reported that inquiries had been made in Venezuela, Peru, Bolivia and Argentina.

Osservatore Discussions

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 17.— Negotiations are under way between the Holy See and the Italian government for an understanding over the publication of the Osservatore Romano, according to Vatican circles today. However, little hope is held that an agreement will be reached and circles here foresee the possibility of permanent withdrawal of the Osservatore Romano from Italian newsstands.

On the other hand, it is realized in Vatican circles that failure of the negotiations might lead to an extremely grave diplomatic situation between the two states, and therefore, every effort is being made to prevent an increase of the present tension.

If the negotiations should fail the newspaper will continue to be published, it was stated, without any interference from the Italian government, and sold outside Italy. In other words, it would resume its complete freedom of action and carry on an independent editorial policy. The copies of the newspaper would then be mailed to foreign countries by the Vatican itself.

Justices' Wives Feted At Musicale

Mrs. Hughes Heads Honored Guests At Congressional Club Gathering

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

War clouds were temporarily forgotten yesterday at the Congressional Club, where Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and wives of the Associate Justices were guests of honor at a tea and musicale.

The U. S. Marine Band Orchestra played while the guests assembled in the ballroom, bright with the flags of the States, a bank of ferns on the mantel, salmon gladioli in a silver vase on the piano, and a low bowl of red and yellow nasturtiums on the punch table. In the dining room bright red tulips were the centerpiece.

Mrs. Edward R. Burke, president of the club, with other officers, welcomed the guests and was seated with them, in the front row, during the musicale.

Mrs. Hughes wore a flowered print, the design in lavender, rose and blue on a black ground, and with it a white hat and corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone wore gray lace, a golden brown hat with a broad brim, and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Hugo Black wore a print frock, a turban of varicolored flowers and corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Stanley F. Reed was in a navy polkadot redingote costume with a navy coat and a toast-colored, broad-brimmed sailor and wore an orchid corsage. Near her sat Mrs. William O. Douglas, in a trim dusty pink jacket suit, a pert little hat of burnt sugar straw and a corsage of white orchids.

Young Artists Are Charming

Last in the line of honor guests was the latest member of the group, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, who wore a green and gray silk print, with a natural-color straw hat and a gardenia corsage. Mrs. Burke was in a costume of navy blue, brightened by the forget-me-not and rose crown of her broad-brimmed hat.

The young artists on the musical program were Rose Berkshire, mezzo soprano, who sang two groups of songs, accompanied by August King-Smith and Beverly Cole, gifted young pianist, who is a student at Woodrow Wilson High School. They were presented by Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, who wore a hat of violets and a suit to match.

The two girls were as lovely as their music. Miss Berkshire wore a long chiffon frock of boy blue, with sash and shoes of deep rose, and Miss Cole, a sky-blue organdy, with full bishop sleeves, and matching ribbons in her curly auburn hair. She was a classmate of John Lundeen, son of Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, in Minneapolis and, since coming to Washington, both are again in the same class in Woodrow Wilson.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Among Tea Guests

Among the guests at the tea was Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who wore a black dress with a yoke of dusty pink, matching the flower in her broad black hat. Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, was there in a smart navy suit, worn with a white sailor.

Mrs. Henry Allen Cooper, one of the 12 founders of the club, was also present and being greeted on all sides by old friends. She arrived just in time to attend the tea, having come only yesterday morning from Racine, Wis., her former home, to reside in Washington. She raised the first $2,000 for the clubhouse of the Congressional Club. Her husband, the late Representative Cooper, was dean of the House at the time of his death.

Mrs. Ralph Church, of Illinois, had as her guest Mrs. Warren Castle, sister of Representative Clarence Kilburn, who is here from Chicago for a short visit. Mrs. John R. Murdock, of Arizona, had as her guest Mrs. Alfred C. Lockwood, wife of Judge Lockwood, of the Arizona Supreme Court, and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, wife of the Chancellor of American University.

Dr. Gerig Named To Haverford Professorship

Philadelphia, May 17.—Dr. Benjamin Gerig, for the past ten years an American member of the Secretariat of the League of Nations, today was named associate professor of government at Haverford College.

In making the appointment public Dr. William Wistar Comfort, who is retiring as president of Haverford next month, emphasized that Dr. Gerig's selection was made with the approval and cooperation of his successor, Felix Morley, who will assume the Haverford presidency in September. Mr. Morley is now the editor of The Washington Post.

"This addition to the Haverford faculty," said President Comfort, "illustrates the increased attention to the study of government which may be expected to characterize the administration of my successor."

Dr. Gerig, at present commissioner general of the League of Nations in charge of its exhibit at the New York World's Fair, was born in Smithville, Ohio, January 18, 1894. He graduated from Goshen College, Indiana, in 1917, and immediately thereafter enlisted in the war relief work of the American Friends Service Committee.

Dr. Gerig is the author of a widely-known book, "The Open Door and the Mandates System" and many articles and pamphlets on various phases of international cooperation.

In Washington tonight Mr. Morley, the president-elect of Haverford, expressed delight at the news of Dr. Gerig's appointment and predicted that it would give the Philadelphia college outstanding leadership as a force operating for intelligent and practical organization of the post-war world.

Sons of Revolution Congress Opens

The fifty-first Congress of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, will open at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Wardman Park Hotel and continue through Wednesday afternoon.

Opening event is a luncheon for executive committee members, in the Madison suite. President General Messmore Kendall will be host. At 3 p. m., buses will leave the hotel for the Washington Cathedral, where the congress will join the Military Order of the World War in the annual ceremony of Massing the Colors. The national trustees will meet at 7:30 p. m. in the Adams Room, and, an hour later, a "surprise night" program will be held in the hotel theater.

Assembly call Monday will be at 9:20 a. m. The morning session will be occupied with reports on credentials, addresses of welcome, presentation of State flags, officers' reports and announcement of committee appointments.

Labor And Defense

The best-laid plans for national defense, backed by ample funds for financing them, still depend for their execution upon the availability of an adequate labor force. With millions of men unemployed it is a paradoxical fact that the recruitment of a working force capable of turning out modern implements of warfare on a tremendously expanded scale will, nevertheless, be extremely difficult.

Ironical though it seems, the prolonged and widespread depression has already led to labor shortages in many industries requiring the services of skilled men. That is because the depression discouraged the training of apprentices and forced a disproportionately large number of applicants for skilled work into the unskilled labor market. In face of this lingering situation our industrialists are today suddenly confronted by the challenge of a huge defense program.

It has to be remembered that wherever the shortage of skilled labor is acute, unfinished work will pile up and precious time, as well as money, will be lost. In short, the industries engaged in work for the defense program not only require a great deal of skilled labor, but that labor must have diversified training to prevent industrial bottlenecks from developing.

It is apparent, therefore, that a great deal of time and money will have to be devoted to preliminary training programs in preparation for the plant expansion required to satisfy our defense needs. President Roosevelt has admitted that necessity, and suggested the possibility of broader training programs under Government direction. But the main responsibility will have to be assumed by industrial leaders familiar with the problems presented and equipped with facilities for instructing novices. It is encouraging that this problem of manpower is already the subject of earnest discussion among industrial experts representing manufacturing companies.

Concerns engaged in the production of aircraft have already been slowed up by the lag in production of aircraft engines, and handicapped by a shortage of trained flight crews. To reach the contemplated yearly airplane output of 50,000 units would, therefore, necessitate much more than a quadrupling of existing productive capacity.

Under the circumstances, it looks as if labor shortage may well prove the major obstacle to speedy attainment of the goals set by the defense program. That will certainly be the case unless extensive and varied training programs are launched with a minimum of delay.

Beaverbrook's Job

Of the new cabinet appointments made by Prime Minister Winston Churchill none overshadows in interest or importance that of Lord Beaverbrook as head of the newly created ministry of aircraft production.

Military aviation, a wholly new weapon when the World War began, is playing a decisive role in the present struggle. It was Germany's overwhelming superiority in the air which enabled her to overrun Poland in a little more than a fortnight, take full possession of southern and central Norway in three weeks and score the staggering successes of the past eight days.

In the months of relative stalemate on the Western Front that followed the outbreak of hostilities, the Allies had a chance to catch up with Germany. They did not succeed in doing so, as Premier Churchill himself testified in a House of Commons speech during the debate on the Norwegian fiasco. Yet continued Allied inferiority in the air can prove a fatal handicap, and there appears too little likelihood that American production can quickly fill the gap.

It was, no doubt, in recognition of this vital fact that Mr. Churchill turned to a political outsider to do the job. Lord Beaverbrook has been on many sides of many political fences during his meteoric career as publisher. Very often he has taken the side opposite that of the present premier. But no one has ever questioned the tremendous driving energy of this son of Canada. And it is precisely such energy which Great Britain needs to overcome the tragic lethargy which is now bearing such bitter fruit.

Backs To The Wall

Either the fall of Brussels or the German break-through in the Argonne would alone be a development of the most serious portent for the Allies. Together these events must be called catastrophic.

The deep penetration southwest of Sedan means that the Maginot Line is broken. Unless the German troops which have poured through into the Argonne can soon be turned back, the whole magnificent defense system along the Franco-German frontier will be rendered useless. Indeed it will be worse than useless, for little of the equipment in this long chain of arsenals can be quickly withdrawn to establish a new front.

If all of Germany's tremendous driving power had been expended on the break-through in the Argonne, the situation would have compensating elements. The Belgian army, the British contingents which have been defending Brussels, the French army of the north, would together be in a position to strike the German flank and perhaps even counter-attack into Germany. But the fall of Brussels and Malines, showing that the Allies are falling back to the Belgian coast, is evidence that the Germans have as much superiority there as at the spearpoint of their thrust.

The situation for the Allied armies, divided, defeated and still apparently much inferior in air power, is, therefore, black. Nothing is to be gained by pretending otherwise. And that situation will be even worse if Mussolini, as there is reason to fear, decides that the moment is at hand to strike directly against southern France, or in conjunction with Germany through Switzerland.

The Italian alliance, and the consequent thinly-veiled hostility of Italy towards Great Britain and France, has already proved of great value to Hitler. It is keeping a large portion of the British fleet in the Mediterranean. And it is immobilizing in the south of France a valuable French army which might be of decisive importance if it could be moved to the north and thrown against the German invaders now. Indeed, from the strategic viewpoint, it makes little difference whether the French troops guarding Provence and the Rhone Valley are actually fighting Italy, or merely held there in anticipation of that outcome.

With or without Italian assistance it is now clearly the German intention to force the speedy capitulation of France. This would seem to involve not merely the occupation of the highly-industrialized northeastern corner, much of which was held by Germany throughout the last war, but also a direct drive against Paris, in the pattern of 1871.

The Germans obviously believe that their air superiority can greatly hamper the dispatch of those heavy reinforcements which must be rapidly embarked from England if the French defense is to be assured of adequate support. The short Dover-Calais route, predominantly used during the last war, may now be jeopardized. But it is inconceivable that there can as yet be serious interference with transportation across the western end of the English Channel.

Over these waters, reinforcements of men and material must now be sent with all possible speed, to support the French regiments which have been ordered by Gen. Gamelin to "die on the spot," rather than yield further territory to the invaders. The back of Great Britain, no less than that of France, is against the wall. Together the two democracies must squarely confront the prospect of superhuman effort to achieve an ultimate hard-won victory, or, alternatively, of a quick and shattering defeat.

Americans Abroad

The Department of State is showing much concern over Americans who ignore its repeated warnings to leave Europe's war areas. Its most recent plea refers somewhat plaintively to the ships that have been sent, and loans that have been offered, to bring home adventurous souls who prefer to remain abroad.

The Department of State undoubtedly has its troubles in this connection. Spain, Portugal and the Bordeaux region of France were designated for congregation of Americans wishing to be repatriated. A day later the picture was changed by the new difficulty of transportation between England and France. Now the 3,500 United States citizens remaining in England are urged to go to Ireland. The rapidity of the war's spread may well necessitate other alterations in plans at a moment's notice.

Conceding the folly of remaining needlessly in belligerent zones, there is yet something to be said for those who have chosen to take their chances, on their own responsibility. The expatriates who have elected to stand by friends, relatives, businesses, homes or the associations of many years' residence abroad are displaying an admirable American trait. Their determination is not unrelated to that "toughness of moral and physical fiber" for which President Roosevelt called in his defense message.

Panicky Markets

If attention were concentrated solely upon the state of domestic business, as reflected in price and production indices, the current panicky declines in stock and commodity prices would be inexplicable. The Federal Reserve Board, for instance, reports that industrial activity steadied in April after three months of sharp decline. Steel ingot production also rose sharply early in May. And since the beginning of the month, there have been other evidences of a turn for the better in the immediate outlook.

The erratic behavior of the stock and speculative commodity markets is, of course, a reflection of the anxiety felt over the sinister turn of events in Europe. In view of the uncertainties created by that giant combat it is not surprising that fear, rather than reasoned calculations, is at present a dominant factor in the market situation.

Such day-to-day ups and downs throw no light, however, upon the actual trend of domestic business. They merely call attention to possible reverses ahead.

On Citizenship

As the result of a joint resolution of both houses of Congress, the third Sunday of May—falling this year on the nineteenth—has been set aside as a public occasion for recognition of all who, by coming of age or by naturalization, have attained American citizenship.

Gatherings to commemorate the occasion are to be held throughout the Nation. It is especially appropriate that one of the principal meetings should be that held in the Nation's Capital. The Americanization School Association and the Immigration and Naturalization Service are sponsoring ceremonies in the District at which messages will be heard from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary Perkins.

American citizenship is a privilege, but it also involves obligations. National Citizenship Day ought to remind all citizens that these obligations require all-year-round observance.

Another Try

There have been repeated failures to agree upon the terms of a revised unemployment compensation act for the District. But representatives of the labor unions and local employers have now compromised their differences and are ready to present a new bill to the House District Committee. Last week the chance that any legislation would be considered at this session appeared to be ruined. That was due to dissension in the committee which was an outcome of the conflict between employer and employe groups.

It now looks as if the last obstacle to passage of a revised measure benefiting not only employers but insured workers has been removed. Both sides are to be congratulated upon making concessions in order to obtain immediate benefits that would otherwise have been forfeited.

The heated exchanges that preceded the final reconciliation between the opposing forces undoubtedly made a peaceful compromise of differences extremely difficult. It is to be hoped that when the time comes for a thoroughgoing revision of the unemployment compensation act, the knowledge gained in these preliminary skirmishes will be put to good use.

Belated Correction

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

Now and then one runs across a bit of printed matter that rouses sharp curiosity which is never satisfied. Knocking around in the reprint columns of American newspapers and magazines is an "excuse-it-please" from the Practitioner, an English medical journal. Offhand it seems possible that the correction may have come too late for some folks, but, anyway, the Practitioner remarks:

"'Local Analgesia.' Under this heading on page 207 of the February issue of the Practitioner was printed a short contribution with two prescriptions. It now appears that the recommended solutions were for 'removal of paint' and not for 'relief of pain' which was the title of the short note as received from a contributor. The fact that the note was based upon an article in a pharmaceutical journal must be blamed in part for the error.

"Readers are asked to accept the sincere regret of the Practitioner for this mistake and to delete the note from their copy."

If our opportunities for observation during the days of the experiment noble in purpose that we knew as prohibition had been less extensive than they were, we'd feel terribly bad about this. We learned during prohibition, however, that people can drink the queerest things without immediate dissolution. We never heard of anyone's drinking paint remover, though doubtless someone did, but we have seen direct evidence that strained shellac won't kill at once. Maybe everything turned out all right, even though the editor's face must have been red.

Keep Off Grass

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the front page of The Post of May 10 there appeared an article entitled "Ickes Tells Park Cops to Snitch on Workers Trampling Lawns." Since when did the efforts of the police to check destruction of property and to identify those who destroy begin to be regarded as "snitching?" The police are also referred to as "Grass Gestapo."

With so much of the spirit of destruction rampant in the world today, we can ill afford to disregard any act of destruction, however small, to escape our observation and our attempt at correction. This is no time to jest about law-breaking or to sneer at sincere efforts to enforce the law.

Those who deliberately walk across lawns maintained at either private or public expense are selfish, lacking in esthetics, and negligent of the rights of others. It is easily conceivable that the present warlord of Europe, who now takes short cuts across innocent nations, leaving shell-pocketed fields and blood-soaked soil in his wake, may have made short cuts across lawns on his way to a paper hanging job back in Austria.

Meanwhile Secretary Ickes says, "Keep Off the Grass" and all worthy American citizens applaud his efforts and are glad that he means what he says.

Presidential Proposal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In case war necessities should warrant the nomination of President Roosevelt for a third term why not make it Roosevelt and Garner and have Mr. Roosevelt agree publicly that when the war crisis is over—when peace is signed—he will immediately resign and automatically usher Mr. Garner into the office of President. That would insure a continuity of existing precepts.

Such an arrangement understood in advance, with the assurance that the Social Security and fundamentals of the wage-hour law would not be disturbed, coupled with a National Cabinet of both parties, might carry prestige abroad during these troublous times. However, I am personally against any man for three terms deep down in my heart. Grant thought post-war conditions justified his nomination but we lived without him. But the feeling now seems to be growing that we may be dragged into Europe's war and "why change in midstream," etc.—hence the above suggestion. Roosevelt has pledged himself to keep us out of war. Maybe he can do it—God bless him if he succeeds.

Roosevelt Defended

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is an answer to the harsh criticism of President Roosevelt in a letter by Alexander Sidney Lanier in The Post of May 10. If this person is a descendant of the one whose name he bears, I'm sure that the great poet would not be proud of him for making this statement.

First of all, take Roosevelt as an humanitarian and social reformer. Never has there been a man in office who appreciates so much the needs of the common man. He is a true friend of the masses, and has kept the common touch even after seven years of holding the highest office that we can give. He has given us social security, minimum wages and maximum hours, unemployment compensation, public health services, low priced electricity and many other things. He has given work to thousands of unemployed in projects that have improved our physical facilities and made America a better living place for every one of us. He has given youth a chance under the Civilian Conservation Corps, at the same time conserving our rapidly diminishing forests and lands, and, too, keeping thousands of boys from the relief or crime rolls.

In spite of Mr. Lanier's criticism, Roosevelt has not "almost ruined the South socially and economically." Quite the contrary, he has helped the farmer much more than did the preceding administration. He has assured him of a fair price for his crops; he has bought his foods to feed the needy; he has loaned him money to pay off the mortgage and has otherwise prevented foreclosure, and has been the best friend the farmer has had in the White House in many years. Speaking as a Southerner, I know that the overwhelming majority of us favor President Roosevelt's farm policy.

Mr. Roosevelt has given us low-interest rates and long-term loans to build more homes which we fully need. He has given the unfortunate ones hope and not despair. There is not one living American whom President Roosevelt has not benefited.

I like The Post very much, and hope you continue your interesting section, "Our Town in Pictures."

Election Year Troubles

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our system of government has numerous flaws, but none has developed quite so much power for evil, startling because so wholly unanticipated by the Founding Fathers, as the paralysis of election year. Every two years we have a national election of Representatives to Congress, and to this is superadded every fourth year the national election of a President. The supreme concern of every member of Congress, overlapping every other consideration, is the matter of his re-election. Consequently every controversial question, or any question that might remotely become controversial, is carefully sidestepped by Congress for fear that a vote on it, either affirmative or negative, might injure the chances of Representatives for re-election. Consequently the Nation dumbly accepts the fact that in an election year nothing may be expected of Congress beyond routine business. Thus the relief of Finland was held up for weeks because Congressmen were afraid to take a decided stand on the matter, and when the relief was finally and grudgingly voted it was everlastingly too late because Finland had been destroyed. And now France, when it is manifestly no more than common prudence and common sense that this country should supply the Allies with their fullest requirements in munitions and supplies, Congress, forsooth, is afraid to take the necessary action because it is "election year."

There is one line of action, however, into which Congress can enter wholeheartedly and without fear, and that is the voting of liberal appropriations for the "pressure groups." The farmers have already tasted the open-handed liberality of Congress, and the "veterans" have just secured an utterly unwarranted and shameful raid on the Treasury, the aggregate of which no man can foresee. And this in the face of the fact that our budget is out of balance by more than $9,000,000,000, and we are face to face with the necessity of expending additional huge sums for defense to meet the crisis that is now threatening in Europe. It is a time for the exercise of the most rigid economy, but Congress must be very generous with the "pressure groups," for this is election year.

EDWARD CLEMENT.

Anti-Lynch Credit

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of May 10, "Southern Vindication," is good. But the credit is given to the wrong group, for the women have aggravated the situation and caused officers to "kill a fugitive resisting arrest." The anti-lynch bill will aggravate the situation immensely.

You are right about the State police, but it is rather the State highway patrols in the South that have reduced lynching. This group prevented a lynching in Maryland last year. Also a lynching down at Miami, Fla., about which case much has been written. The State police prevented a lynching in New Jersey last year, a Negro rape case, but they failed to keep Negro cranberry pickers from being beaten up and maltreated. Detroit police kept Negro school children from being killed, but not from being beaten up in a high school riot at Detroit last year.

Since all of the Southern States now have highway patrols with radio alarm systems, lynching in the South will be negligible. In counties with a population of from twenty to forty thousand people, with no county police and three or four city police who do not go out of the city limits, only a sheriff and two or three deputies had to cope with the situation in mob violence. It was the lack of police protection in an otherwise law-abiding community that made lynching possible.

You publish a good newspaper.

FOE OF LYNCHING.
Washington, May 11.

Poppy Drive

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The nineteenth annual poppy campaign of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was launched this week. This campaign is stark evidence of the fact that, although the first World War ended more than 20 years ago, many thousands of veterans who fought for "democracy" were rewarded with the right of poverty for the rest of their lives. Many more thousands of homes and lives were broken and many more thousands of broken bodies now grace our hospitals.

A crisis has arisen today, and many of our public officials, newspaper columnists and radio commentators are urging us to get into this second World War. Let the man in the street be wary, for whatever he may be led to believe he will be fighting for, his reward will be a horror similar to that of the last war.

The only struggle from which the man in the street can reap benefits is a consistent and hard-fought struggle for jobs, for economic security and for peace.

An Appreciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to express my heartfelt thanks for the editorials appearing in The Post from day to day. Whether one considers form or content, they seem to me to represent a rare type of excellence. In the issue of May 14, "Craven Performance" is at once courageous, moderate in tone and most timely. "The La Follette Bill" shows fine discrimination in dealing with a national question of importance, and the remaining four editorials are not behind these in readability, good sense and timeliness. Your columnists deserve similar words of praise. The articles by Mark Sullivan and Walter Lippmann in the issue under consideration are in excellent form, and show a large degree of wisdom and foresight. At a critical time in the history of the Nation The Washington Post seems to me to be standing strongly for true American principles, and exerting a far-reaching influence for good.

Study In Cards

It's at one of those bridge games where an unhappy male sits in with three females. The idea isn't the male's. Perish the thought!

Just 25 minutes ago the male is seated comfortably in his favorite chair, puffing peacefully on a pipe and reading Shirley Povich's swell magazine article on "Old Fox" Clark Griffith. At peace with the world is this male when the door trembles under the impact of a series of knocks. Not one rap, you understand, but a flock of them. The imperative kind.

Quickly the male puts on his shoes, not bothering to tie the laces, and thanks his lucky stars that his shirt still is on. Then with laces waving, he hobbles to the door.

It's two of his wife's girl friends so the male dons his good-host cloak and grins his Sunday best. There's no need in wading through further detail. One of the girls gets the original idea that a bridge game will be enjoyable. A vote hastily is taken. The results are—yes, three (3); no, one (1).

Skipping the irrelevant part of the male's bringing out the tables and chairs and pinching his finger in opening them, that brings us approximately up to the moment. Now go on with the story.

The first hand goes smoothly. The male and his partner are only set three tricks for an 800 penalty. Chivalrously the male shoulders the blame although he knows darn well that—oh well, what's the use?

On the next hand the worst happens—what the male always dreads and yet anticipates. The cards are shuffled and dealt when the floodgates of chatter burst.

It starts innocently enough. Just to break an awkward silence, one of the girls remarks:

"Aren't those new wedgie shoes just adorable?"

That's all. Just those seven words and a bridge game is ruined.

While the air grows heated with adjectives like awful, cute, silly, darling, fashionable, clumsy, practical, etc., the male forlornly picks up his cards and studies them. Several times he clears his throat, opens his mouth and then goes back to a perusal of his pasteboards.

Tiring of the sight of his cards, his eyes wander around the walls for an inspiration. Meanwhile the debate over wedgies waxes hotter, louder and more bitter. No inspiration discernible on the walls, his eyes turn floorward. Ah! There's something to do. Get those laces tied.

Success on one shoe greets his contortions under the table. Fumbling with the second shoe, his hand accidentally brushes the knee of his wife's girl friend. She accepts his mumbled apology with an icy and venomous glare.

He abandons the shoe lace, shrinks back into his chair, shuts his ears to the voice-avalanche and goes back to a study of his cards.

Now cards are a commonplace thing to this male. He's been in countless poker, bridge and other games. So there really is no need for his looking at the present cards so carefully. Yet for the first time he is not evaluating the cards. He's actually seeing them.

The picture cards in his hand especially fascinate him. There are only five. The king, queen and jack of spades, and the king and queen of hearts. Nothing to boast about.

But the male gets to wondering. Are these caricatures supposed to represent real persons? If so, whom? Take the queen of hearts for example. Beautifully gowned in regal robes, she is probably royalty of olden times. But just who?

So the male gets a pencil and jots down the picture cards in his hands and determines to learn the identity of these people whose images he is holding and has held for—lo—these many years.

Without further ado, the fruits of his research are herewith presented. If you don't want to accept the following facts, check the Library of Congress yourself.

That handsome king of hearts is none other than Charlemagne, who was crowned Emperor of France in 799 and who had five wives before he left this world for a more peaceful place. This Charlemagne was a fighter of note despite the fancy ermine cloak he still holds in his right hand. Originally that was a battleax he brandished in his left hand, but, probably for space reasons, the cardmakers changed it to a sword.

The queen of hearts was not the wife of Charlemagne although she now shares the same suit with him. She's the Judith of Apocryphal Book of Judith and is regarded as one of the bravest women of history. You should have learned all about her in Sunday school. She's the heroine who saved Jerusalem from apparently inevitable annihilation by chopping off the head of Holofernes, general of the besieging Assyrians, as he lay drunk in his tent.

You'll never guess who the king of spades is! It's none other than David of the Bible. You know, the one who went forth against Goliath, used a slingshot to knock the giant down to his size and then cut off Goliath's head—probably as a trophy to hang over the fireplace.

The queen of spades is Pallas, otherwise Minerva, the Goddess of War.

Now for the jack of spades and don't jump to conclusions. He was not the son of David and Minerva. Jack, it seems, was one of Charlemagne's trusted lieutenants. A great huntsman and fighter, Jack generally is shown in cards as a swaggering Beau-Brummelish type with bobbed hair.

There's no more bridge that evening. Long and furious rages the "discussion" over wedgies.

OLLIE GOODMAN.

For Defense Fund

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since we have done things differently under President Roosevelt—why not do it up in good fashion and have a national contribution to pay for an "arms program." Such as we have had on the President's birthday? I might add that I gladly contribute for infantile paralysis—the Red Cross and for my party's Jefferson Day dinners and why not carry it to a logical conclusion and show him that this Nation is united?

Intangible Defenses

By Mark Sullivan

JUST WHY must we prepare? What is the "why" of the address President Roosevelt made to Congress this week?

Understanding of the answer to that question depends, as in many a situation, on understanding of the distinction between certain words. Begin by reading some sentences from the report of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. The words to observe here are "military," and "armies."

"From the military point of view . . . the armies of Europe and Asia do not menace us. To be a menace they must be transported across the sea in ships . . . The armed forces of no foreign nation or group of nations can seriously threaten our continental security if we make sure that we command the seas which separate us from all potential enemies."

That is quite true, so far as it goes. The emphasis of that is on naval strength, and this is sound enough—again, so far as it goes. A navy strong enough, with adequate supplements of airplanes and shore defenses, could prevent any invasion of the United States by an army of an enemy. It would have to be a very large navy. It would have to be large enough to repel, simultaneously, two or more attempts at invasion. For example, an attempt by let us say Japan or Russia in Alaska, and at the same time an attempt by let us say Germany in Uruguay, South America—which is a third of the way around the earth from Alaska.

WHEN WE SPEAK of defending Uruguay in South America, we begin to understand Mr. Roosevelt's address to Congress, and the reason for it. We do not, and cannot, limit ourselves to defending the soil of the United States. We must defend the whole Western Hemisphere. We must do it because we are committed to doing it, by the century old Monroe Doctrine. We must do it for the further reason that we are pledged to do it, by recent agreement entered into with every one of the 20 other nations on the Western Hemisphere. Finally, we must defend the whole Western Hemisphere because of our own self-interest, because that is the best way, the only certain way to defend ourselves; for a European or Asiatic nation getting a foothold in South or Central America could presently proceed to invade the United States.

This necessity, this policy, of defending the whole Western Hemisphere, is now well understood by many—but also is not understood by many, as letters received by this column show.

So we must defend the whole Western Hemisphere. That is certain.

Defend it against what? If it were defense against military invasion alone, against foreign armies, that would be a simple task. Not an easy task, on the contrary an extremely hard task; but a definite task.

But we are going to defend the Western Hemisphere against more than merely armed invasion. We are going to defend it against two other things. The two mentioned in Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress:

". . . protection of the whole Western Hemisphere against invasion or domination by non-American nations."

There, in those words, "control or domination," we come to what we must understand. "Control or domination" do not come in the form of a foreign army. They are not something we can shoot a gun at. "Control or domination" are the advance agents of the foreign army. They are what prepares the way for the foreign army, what opens the gate for the foreign army when the foreign army is ready. They are the thing we have come to describe as the "Trojan horse," the "fifth column."

In what form would "control or domination" appear in a South American country? It would come, not in one form but many. One form would be economic domination. It would appear in any or all of the forms that pave the way for dictator government.

WE ARE GOING to protect every one of the 21 nations of the Western Hemisphere against "control or domination." We are going to do this because we must—because control or domination is presently followed by an army; and because a foreign army, once entrenched on the Western Hemisphere, is immediately a threat to the soil of the United States.

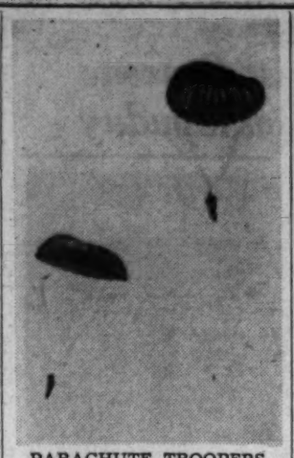
Go back now to the three things we arm against, the three things we are going to protect the American Hemisphere against. The three are "invasion or control or domination."

Of all three this can be said: Attempt at invasion or control or domination, of any country in the Western Hemisphere becomes a threat only in case of, and after, one event. It becomes a threat only if Germany wins the war in Europe.

If Germany does not win the war, if Britain and France win, then we will not have the fear against which now we arm. In that event, we are in the same position as before the war. Britain and France already have a foothold on the Western Hemisphere, but we do not fear them nor arm against them. With Britain and France winning the war, we have no more need to arm, for protection of South America, than we had two years ago or ten years ago. If a dispatch came from Europe this afternoon, saying the Allies had won the war—Congress would not pass the measure Mr. Roosevelt proposed last Thursday, and Mr. Roosevelt would withdraw his proposal.

What we arm against is one thing. We arm against Germany winning the war. We begin to arm at the moment when, and not until, and only because, there seems possibility of Germany winning the war.

This, I think, is incontestable. From it, a clear conclusion follows.



PARACHUTE TROOPERS

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Civilized Warfare

WHEN THE GERMANS were smashing through Poland without the formality of a declaration of war many patriotic Polish civilians were captured and quickly executed for sniping the invading Nazis. As to whether they actually did snipe the Germans there is only the word of the Germans themselves. But let it be assumed that they did take pot shots at the faceless men.

Under the code ironically known as the rules of civilized warfare civilians who fire on the soldiers of an invading army are subject to the death penalty, but only if the invader has declared himself. The Germans had not declared war on Poland, nor have they yet done so. Their method has been to invite an invader nation to "cooperate," which is their word for surrender. They obtain a certain advantage by this, but the people, including the women, of the invaded nation by the same process deserve the right to shoot them on sight. If the Germans were a civilized people the civilians would enjoy the status of captured soldiers should they fall into the hands of the faceless men.

THE GERMANS have threatened reprisals at the rate of 10-to-1 for the killing of their parachute soldiers who fell into the hands of the Dutch, but the parachute soldier creates a new problem, even though his country shall have formally declared war. He is dropped in communities where there are only civilians, and his mission includes the killing of civilians, who probably will be unarmed, in order to spread terror and permit the capture of a few men at important points in the rear. What else would he be doing there?

To localize the problem let it be assumed that a group of German parachute soldiers suddenly appears in the outskirts of some small and peaceful city in Iowa. There are no American troops near, for this is a blitzkrieg, but, by way of admonition, the Germans shoot a few American civilians. In these circumstances would it be unreasonable to expect that everyone with a household pistol, a hunting rifle or old military weapon would try to draw a bead on a faceless man, or that the local racketeer, in a passion of honest patriotism, would whip his Thompson gun out of the golf bag or fiddle box and strike a blow for freedom? And if this happened would civilians subject themselves to execution by the invader if they should be captured and eventually squealed on by the local Nazi bundsmen?

IT WOULD SEEM to make a difference, but, to comply with the old formalities, it would be possible, in war with the chosen people of the Reich, to swear in the entire American population, male and female, as members of the armed forces, with only a uniform brassard for identification, thus reserving for the civilians in their home communities the rights of combatants.

That provision would seem to cover the case very neatly, and the distribution of a few arms in the household would help. True, the civilians would assume the risks of soldiers, but don't they, anyway? Aren't they bombed and shelled and subject to shooting by the parachute troops?

As to whether the parachute soldiers met death in action or after surrender there would be no immediate need for discussion. It is a fine point, anyway, and one that would have to be worked out later. The important thing at a critical moment would be to remove the danger in a town peopled by civilians and having a capacity for patriotic indignation.

THERE ARE TWO problems here: One is the ground soldier of any army not formally at war with the invaded country. Any civilian has a right to kill him, and if a German platoon were to walk down an important street of, say, Atlanta, at high noon today, shooting promiscuously and setting fire to the buildings the civilians would react as the young Poles did.

The other is the parachute soldier in a civilian area, regardless of whether a formal state of war exists. Being landed among civilians, his mission obviously is to kill civilians and help capture their country. There being no soldiers about, the civilians surely will do their best, and the question of the invader's rights will be put on the spike until civilization can get around to it.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Time In Order To Arm

IN ORDER to carry out the American defense program a gigantic national effort will be required. The people are ready to make that effort as long as they are convinced that their leaders know what they are doing and are placing the interests of the country above every other consideration. They will like best those leaders who do not treat them as children, too young to be told the facts of life or as nervous invalids who must not be shocked by the grim truth; they will wish to be treated as brave and honest and loyal men who are responsible individually and collectively for their country and its future. They will do whatever is necessary provided only their leaders ask it of them plainly and squarely.

Yet the most gigantic effort of which this country is capable may not be sufficient to protect the American people from finding themselves isolated and surrounded in a world of victorious aggressor states, and, therefore, involved for a generation or more in the awful necessity of living conscripted and mobilized in a perpetual state of imminent war. Nothing that the President has proposed, nothing that the nation is now talking about doing, is designed to avert such a catastrophe. The plain, hard, indisputable truth is that the catastrophe can be averted only by the successful resistance of the Allies. If that resistance is broken this summer, the program of national defense will be pitiably inadequate.

FOR WE SHALL never be given time to build a second navy nor the time to achieve superiority in the air. The very fact that we have undertaken to perfect our defenses will be a compelling reason why the others will act to prevent us. Faster than we can conceivably build the means of defense, the victorious aggressor states will occupy by force or by subversive conspiracies the strategic outposts of our defensive system.

For we cannot build a navy and air force and an adequate continental army as fast as the victorious coalition could take possession of Iceland, Greenland, Ireland, Portugal, Gibraltar, the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands, the Allied colonies in western Africa, the Netherlands Indies, Singapore, Hongkong, the Philippines, and Guam; we cannot perfect our defenses rapidly enough to suppress the invasions of the Fifth Columns which are already prepared in several vitally important countries of this hemisphere. Once those outposts are in the hands of victorious, unfriendly, aggressive, and hungry powers, we shall not be allowed the time to arm ourselves adequately even if it were possible, which it is not, for one nation to arm itself adequately against the combined military forces of virtually the whole world.

THE AMERICAN people will not be in possession of the truth until they know clearly that a successful resistance by the Allies this summer is absolutely vital to the defense of the United States. Any attempt to conceal this truth is at best an innocent but a dangerous ignorance and at worst it is treacherous alien propaganda.

The commonsense of the people has already caused them to see that the outcome of the battle now being fought in Western Europe matters profoundly to them. If it does not matter, why is Congress ready now to vote this new defense program? If there has ever been any truth in the argument that the outcome of this war is none of our affair, why is the Congress interested just now in a gigantic effort to strengthen our defenses? What is the sense of increasing our armaments if the ocean is so wide that no one can threaten us? The ocean is just as wide as it was on the day Hitler invaded Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

If Senator Nye has been a sound and reliable leader on the path of peace, then the people, the Congress, and both parties are putting themselves to a lot of trouble for no reason at all. The only thing that has changed in the past week is that a great battle is being fought in Belgium and in France, and that in this battle the Allies may be defeated. That is why this country is arming. It is arming because it realizes that an Allied defeat would at once gravely undermine the security of the United States.

HOW GRAVELY it may be undermined few of us have realized as yet. Let us face the whole thing frankly and without flinching.

Let us suppose that Hitler smashes his way through Belgium to the Channel ports and that he drives the French army back behind Paris into a corner of France. He then lets loose his air force against England and Ireland, damaging seriously the industrial plants which supply Britain with arms and making the British harbors extremely difficult to use. The bases of the British fleet are damaged, the British Isles are blockaded and threatened with starvation, the British people are driven underground in the hurricane of fire and steel. What does the British navy do under these circumstances?

THERE HAS ALREADY been some speculation in this country on this subject. The usual answer is that the British fleet would go to Canada and to Singapore. But would it and could it abandon the British people in the British Isles to starvation and destruction? Is it not plain that if ever Hitler had the British Isles in his power and France fighting in the last ditch, he would offer the two nations a choice between a devastation—such as he has inflicted on the Poles—and the surrender, as a ransom from annihilation, of their navies and of the strategic bases on which their navies depend?

Have we a right to suppose that the Allied navies would come over here and, abandoning Europe, would join us in the defense of this hemisphere? Is it not evident that the Allies would be bound to say to us; we shall not surrender our fleets and ransom our people if you help us with all your power; if you will not, if you wash your hands of Europe, then we shall use these fleets to ransom from death the people who built them and the families of the men who man them. And if this means that Hitler has a ready-made navy at his disposal in an ocean where you have none, and can build none, so much the worse for you. We shall be no worse off in Europe, and we shall have you as companions in our misery.

THAT IS IN OUTLINE the full truth of what a Nazi victory can mean to the United States. We dare not assume that if Hitler conquers Europe, the Allied navies will become part of our naval power. We dare not assume that they will be scuttled in a final gesture of desperate defiance, though even if they were, the naval power of Germany, Italy and Japan would still make us vulnerable in both oceans. We have to assume that if we do not supply the Allies with the means to resist, and if, above all, we deprive them a reason why they should continue to resist, then if this stupendous offensive succeeds, we may find that the Allied fleets which now guard the Atlantic Ocean against the Axis will become part of the power of the Axis.

I can assure the reader that I have not invented this idea; I have recently been to Europe and what I am saying is no mere personal conjecture of my own.

Therefore, it is not only necessary for us to see to it that the Allies have the weapons and the food with which to continue to resist but that they do not lose the incentive to resist. They must be told that we shall sustain their resistance this summer, and that, if they hold on, the enormous resources and industrial power of this country will be organized and the products made available as rapidly as possible. With that assurance they should be able to repel the attack. With that assurance every people in Europe, the conquered peoples, the entangled peoples, the nonbelligerent peoples, will know that liberation is practicable and that an indomitable resistance is worth the sacrifice.

WE CAN SEND no army to Europe. We do not have an army and if Hitler's offensive succeeds, no army can be raised, trained, equipped and transported across the ocean. But what we can send at once to Europe is the news that acting within this hemisphere and in the zone of our own vital interests alone, we shall do all in our power to sustain the resistance of the peoples whose defeat would vitally impair our own security.

That is what we are bound to do as events unfold. But it may make all the difference in the world if we know it now and say it clearly. We need the resistance of the Allies in order that we may be granted the time to arm for our own defense, and only at our peril will we flinch at recognizing the truth.

A Veteran Retires

Shirley Temple's out of it—
Heard Pa Time's stern call;
Shirley's through with glory now—
Old age gets us all!

Shirley's gone and quit the films—
Made her farewell bow;
Gone are all the good old days—
She's eleven now!

Out of pictures, through with 'em—
It was in the books;
Aging movie stars, she knows,

In eclipse is Shirley T.—
Gone is all the glow;
She is now an old-time star—
Youth must have its show!

Shirley's through, as through can be—
Age is marching on;
She has lost her youthful ways—
And her figure's gone.

Shirley's passing o'er the hill to the setting sun;
Ah, in time the passing years
Get 'most everyone!

Shirley's an old-timer now—
Telltale is her hair;
She's as bored with living as Any millionaire.

Shirley's getting matronly,
Shirley's getting fat;
At eleven all joints creak . . .
Life is just like that.

Welles to Attend Pan American Peace Mass Here

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles will be one of the leading Government officials at the Pan American Peace Mass to be celebrated tomorrow at 10:30 in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on The Catholic University campus, Dr. Edwin Ryan, secretary of the Institute of Ibero-American Studies, has announced.

All members of the Diplomatic Corps of the American Republics and delegates to the American Scientific Congress of the Pan American Union, now in session here, have been invited with their families and friends.

Unusual features will be the delivery of the sermon in Spanish and recitation of the "Prayer for Peace" in four languages common to the Western Hemisphere—Spanish, Portuguese, French and English.

The mass will be celebrated by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university; and the sermon will be preached by Father Ryan.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

JESSE STUART, the Kentucky hillboy who wrote his first poems on pale poplar leaves, whose autobiography tells of literally fighting his way through school and college, whose stories smell of fresh-turned sod and sound like mountain brooks, has written his first novel, "Trees of Heaven" (Dutton, $2.50).

It has the earthy outdoor quality of his autobiography, "Beyond Dark Hills," and of his book of stories, "Head of W-Hollow." No man could go into the hills and write this stuff; he must have lived there. The imagery springs from deep memories: Subrinea's legs are "brown as a pawpaw leaf in September;" old Anse Bushman says that he raised his children in a good nest, but they "went away like a wild bunch of quails;" the coals in Anse's fireplace were "ripe-persimmon-colored;" and Anse himself, looking at his spring lambs, was "proud as a black snake that has his new spring skin." The path to the Tussie squatter's cabin was "slick as a path from a groundhog hole," and it was "the color of a copperhead's belly." And it riles Tarvin Bushman's blood to hear a redbird sing in the dark hills in the spring.

These people are real, too, if they are hardly new. You have met them all before: red-bearded old Anse Bushman, the patriarch of the hills; his tall, thin wife Fronnie, worn with years of hoeing corn, dancing and child-bearing, and their 18-year-old 6-foot-5 son Tarvin, last of the covey of young quail. The Bushmans live in a white house on the hill; they have 300 sheep and 9 cows and they kill 20 hogs each autumn. Anse is land-hungry and a good man to save money, though he hesitates to buy new "house plunder" (furniture) for his wife. You have met the Tussie, too, squatters in the uncut timberland; no-account, moonshine Boliver with his long rusty bull neck; his slatternly wife Crissie, and their Subrinea, a wild phlox in beauty to look at, with cat-green eyes and hair the color of wheat straw. Nor is Bollie Beaver, the bad bully who wants Subrinea and fights Tarvin for her, a novel type of character.

YOU KNOW BEFORE Subrinea has dipped the first gourdful of water out of the spring for Tarvin how this story is going to end. You may not quite foresee all the complications of Anse's prejudice against a squatter, nor how it will be overcome, but you know—and you read on eagerly. For there is a singing strength to Jesse Stuart's mountain prose, and his familiar story seems no more banal than the coming of another spring. He is not writing about quaint hillfolk, you feel, and this is his unique quality: through him the back hollows speak in their own tongue.

Jesse Stuart makes you smell the hot syrup of the sorghum molasses; you feel the rhythm of the square dance on the solid oak floor; and not the least effective are the details of the proclamations at the sheriff's sale, and the items of the Tussie account at the grocer's, which you suspect Jesse Stuart must have copied out of the books up in Greenup County, chuckling and talking fast as he copied. And I doubt that lambs have ever been as honestly born on a cold winter night on the pages of any previous novel.

I recalled, reading this, the pathetic story Jerome Beatty told in his "Americans All Over." In Athens Beatty strolled out from his hotel to buy a Paris Herald. When he asked for it a strange young man in plus-fours stepped up and said eagerly, "You're an American?" It was Jesse Stuart, of whom Beatty, strangely, had never heard, and he proceeded to pour forth his loneliness to Beatty's amazed ears. He had written a book and made a little money, and had gone out from his native hills to see the world. Seeing the world had left him lonely, which is as it should be. If Jesse Stuart ever ceases to be lonely and talk-flooded, he will cease to be Jesse Stuart, Kentucky writer.

Nazis Take Town Believed Roosevelt Family Cradle

By the Associated Press

Surrender to German invaders of the island of Tholen, Holland has brought within the hands of Hitler the supposed ancestral lands of President Roosevelt.

Dispatches yesterday told of the fall of the island in the province of Zeeland.

From the island of Tholen, so some historians say, Klaes Martenszen Van Roosevelt, lineal ancestor of two American Presidents, came to New Amsterdam (later New York) in 1649.

His other Presidential descendant was Theodore Roosevelt.

At the White House, it was said that while monuments and relics indicate that the village of Oudvossemeer, on the island of Tholen, may have been the cradle of the President's family, such a fact has never been definitely established.

Welles Speaks As Sessions End

ENDING ON A somber note, occasioned by events in Europe, the eighth American Scientific Congress passed into history yesterday.

At the final plenary session, held in the Pan American Building, Undersecretary of State Welles said the more than 2,000 delegates from North, South and Central America "must persuade men of goodwill everywhere that the leaders of governments must be compelled to avoid the mistakes of the past and, learning by the tragic experience of the past two decades, to plan a new world order, based upon justice and fair dealing in which all may share."

Addresses by Welles and Domingo Ramos, chairman of the Cuban delegation, preceded by the adoption of resolutions aimed at bringing the 21 American republics closer together in every way, closed the giant conference except for sightseeing tours.

Many of the delegates left Washington by steamer last night for Old Point Comfort, Va. They will return here tomorrow and leave Monday for Philadelphia, proceeding thence to New York.

THE CONGRESS NOT ONLY advanced the cause of science, but strengthened "the entire fabric of inter-American relations," said Welles, president of the assembly, first of its kind to be held here since 1915.

Contrasting the positions of contemporary New World scientists with their fellows in totalitarian countries, one group working in freedom and without fear and the other under constant surveillance, he said:

"We cannot but speculate whether, in those parts of the world where free inquiry is no longer possible, there will not be, at least in so far as the things of the mind and the spirit are concerned, a return to the Dark Ages.

"What hope is there for future generations in countries where the state by fiat has declared that all persons must believe glaring distortions of the truth, where evil is declared to be good, where falsehood is paraded as the truth, where aggression, pure and simple, is represented as self defense?"

Welles voiced confidence "that the present menace to civilization will pass and that the day will come when the now destructive forces of evil which men themselves have created will be vanquished."

A LIKE VIEW was expressed by Dr. Ramos, shocked by "the spectacle of countries who have perverted science and all its wonders to shackle it to the service of destruction and death."

One of the resolutions adopted by the congress, submitted by the anthropology section, cited the lack of scientific support for "discrimination against any linguistic, social, religious or political group on the grounds that it is racially inferior."

Other action included:

Recommendation of the establishment of an Institute of Andean Anthropology, an inter-American conservation commission, a cooperative institute of tropical agriculture, an organization concerned with statistical problems of mutual interest, a Pan American Institute of Economic and Social Research and a consultative commission for improvement of education.

Recommendation to expand cosmic ray observation stations in Latin America and to urge the republics to develop more magnetic observatories and bolster their cooperation in locating earthquakes.

Recommendation of studies relating to uniform criminal laws.

Red Cross Gets Contributions From Wives of 3 Presidents

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft joined individuals and organizations in all parts of the Nation yesterday in contributing to the American Red Cross appeal for a $10,000,000 war relief fund, it was announced at Red Cross headquarters.

The minimum war relief quota assigned to the District of Columbia Chapter was announced as $150,000.

As the ever-quickening response occurred, Chairman Norman H. Davis wired Red Cross chapters:

"Every hour brings new and agonizing details of human destruction and misery in Europe, far surpassing anything our imagination can conceive. . . . In response to the first calls for aid we immediately made funds available to the Belgian and Netherlands Red Cross societies and are purchasing large quantities of ambulances, hospital trucks and medical supplies here and in England. . . . In their hour of trial we cannot fail them."

The Chicago chapter reported that the International Harvester Co. had contributed $50,000 to the war relief fund, the largest individual contribution received to date.

Other large gifts were $10,000 from the Anheuser-Busch, Inc., of St. Louis; $5,000 from Former Senator and Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps, of Denver; $5,000 from Mrs. Edward S. Harkness; $5,000 from the United Gas, Inc., of Philadelphia, and $5,000 and $2,500 from Cummins Catherwood and Joseph E. Widener, respectively, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been making a monthly contribution to the Red Cross, wrote to Chairman Davis that she would double the amount.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the D. A. R., issued an appeal for the fund to all D. A. R. State regents.

Former Ambassador to Germany Hugh L. Wilson, sent a contribution. A colony of retired ministers at Penney Farms, Fla., sent $200.

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, assistant director of the Red Cross Volunteer Special Services, was host at the national headquarters yesterday to ranking women of the embassies and legations of the nations to which the Red Cross is sending war relief. They inspected samples of garments and surgical dressings made by the volunteers.

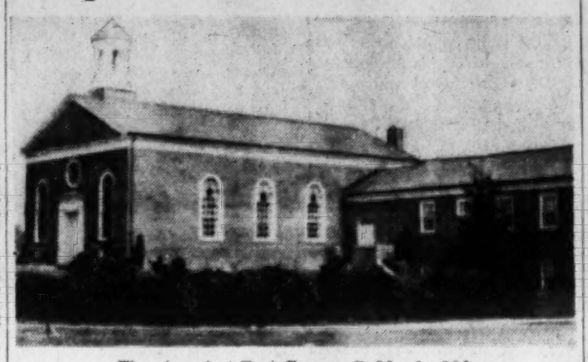
Frederick A. Delano, president of the Americanization School Association, will preside, and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will give the invocation.

Church of the Week

Last Window in Fort Meade Chapel to Be Dedicated



The chapel at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

By Robert Tate Allan.

The Post Chapel of Fort George G. Meade, Md., tomorrow will mark another stride in its history, when a memorial window will be dedicated by the Veterans' Association of the 304th Engineers, 79th division, World War.

A large number of veterans, relatives and friends will make the trip from Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore to take part in the exercises, scheduled to begin at 2 p. m. They will include Col. J. Frank Barber and Maj. S. Friel, both of whom have helped secure funds for the memorial project.

First regiment to arrive at Fort (then Camp) Meade in the summer of 1917, the 304th Engineers mapped the camp site, constructed great rows of temporary barracks, built roads, water system, heating plants, sewerage, filtration and made other necessary arrangements.

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, of this city, Chief of Engineers, is expected to deliver the principal address tomorrow, and other distinguished officers of the association also will speak. The Commanding Officer of Fort Meade, Col. Gilbert M. Allen, will accept the window, and the dedicatory prayer will be offered by Lieut.-Col. Frank C. Rideout, chaplain of the United States Army.

Last to Be Installed

The window will be the ninth and last to be installed in the chapel, others having been presented by the 34th and 66th infantry regiments, regular army, stationed at the garrison; the American Legion, department of Maryland, and the 313th, 314th, 315th and 316th Infantry Regiments and the 312th Field Artillery Regiment of the 79th division.

The design of the window, conforming with the others, portrays "Christ Healing the Blind," completing the general theme of the life of Jesus, the subjects of which have been arranged chronologically.

The 304th Engineers' regimental insignia rests at the bottom of the window. On either side are inscribed on plates the places where the regiment served during the World War —Camp Meade, Montfaucon, Troyon and Grande Montagne.

In Center of Post

Approved by the War Department, the insignia bears the Latin motto—"Duci Nil Nisi Summun"—"Give your leader only that which is complete and perfect."

The window is the fifth to be installed and dedicated during the four years' chaplaincy of Lieut.-Col. Rideout, who is under orders for a tour of duty in the Panama Canal Zone, sailing from New York on August 6. He has requested a leave of absence for a vacation in Maine before sailing.

Located in the center of the Army post, the chapel is used by both Catholics and Protestants. Its construction is suitable for all denominations, whether they follow a liturgical or non-liturgical form of worship. Of red brick and simple colonial style, it has a seating capacity of 300 persons.

350 Are Expected To Mass Colors At the Cathedral

More than 350 military patriotic, veteran and civic organizations are expected to participate in the services at the thirteenth annual massing of the colors tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the Washington Cathedral's open-air amphitheater.

Sponsored by the Cathedral and the District Chapter of the Military Order of the World War, the service will have Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, as principal speaker. The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will introduce him, nad Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, will preside.

More than 300 delegates to the annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution will join in the services, with the Rev. Henry L. Darlington, of New York, chaplain general of that organization, offering devotions. The Marine Band will play for a half-hour preceding the services.

St. Paul's Christian Endeavor To Mark Its 50th Anniversary

A half-century of Christian leadership training and character building will be commemorated tomorrow by the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett street northwest.

Comprising mature men and women eager to continue their youthful interest in Endeavor work, the society is among the oldest in America, formed just nine years after "Mother" Clark launched the movement in Portland, Me.

Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, will lead a tribute to the society at regular services tomorrow at 11 a. m., preaching on "A Program of Permanence." Earlier, Dr. B. F. Bieber will accept a red leather-bound Bible for the church from the society. Special music and other features are planned.

A dinner will follow in the parish hall, after which the society members and friends will ride out to the National Lutheran Home for the Aged, Eighteenth and Douglas streets northeast, where Dr. Snyder will conduct chapel rites at 3 p. m.

The Luther League of St. Paul's will tender a fellowship supper to the society at 6:30 p. m. in the church hall.

Russell Alden, 3840 Harrison street northwest, son of L. D. Alden, charter member and original vice president, and who himself became a Junior Endeavorer in 1893, is among the oldest members. Miss Louie Leeds, whose sister, Belle Leeds, was second vice president of the original body, is the society's present organist.

Luther W. and George R. Linkins, real estate agents, are among the early members. President of the first society was the late George F. Muth, formerly associated with the well-known downtown firm of that name.

Mrs. C. C. Anderson, missionary committee chairman of the present group, has spent some 50 years in Endeavor work, including about 30 at St. Paul's.

At present, other officers of the society, initiated in 1890 when St. Paul's Church stood at Eleventh and H streets northwest, are Mrs. R. A. Pence, president; Miss Myrl Rawls, vice president; Miss Corinne Schmid, secretary, and Mrs. H. K. Schmid, her mother, treasurer; and Mrs. Roy Clark and Mrs. Henrietta O'Shea, chairmen, respectively, of the social and meeting committees.

Lawyers Urge Crime Board For Juveniles

Statewide Agencies Would Supervise Young Offenders

A system of State-wide agencies for treatment of convicted criminals over Juvenile Court age but under 21 was recommended yesterday by the American Law Institute as a means to curb "dead-end justice" in this country.

The institute including many of the Nation's leading lawyers and judges, approved the report of a special committee which has just completed a two-year investigation of America's youth-crime problem.

The new State agencies would operate through an appointive board to be known as the Youth Correction Authority, composed of three persons of special qualifications. It would govern the correction and rehabilitation of persons above the juvenile category—16 in most States—but not yet considered hardened criminals.

Segregation Is Object

Prime purpose of the authority would be to segregate "gangage" offenders in places of detention from older criminals to prevent the mingling of first offenders and hardened lawbreakers.

"More criminals are made than unmade by our present system of handling youthful defendants," the committee asserted. An unchecked rise in recidivism (repetition of crime) has resulted from the present penal system in this country, the investigators charged.

The proposed authority would have power to:

Approve or establish places of preliminary detention for young offenders pending examination and study of each case by psychiatrists, physicians, etc.

Establish treatment and training services looking to the rehabilitation of youthful criminals.

Generally make use of and correlate law enforcement, detention, probation, medical, educational, correctional, segregative and other public and private institutions now operating.

Committed to Authority

According to committee recommendations, the trial judge would have the usual discretion in acquittals and assessment of fines, but in all convictions excepting those involving the death sentence or life imprisonment, the judge would commit the youth to the Authority.

Members of the Youth Correction Authority units would have terms of nine years. The Authority would have the power to keep any youth under its supervision as long as "in its judgment such control is necessary for the protection of the public."

To a lengthy indictment of present "bad detention systems" in which, it was charged, there is a lack of segregation in jails throughout the country, the committee added criticism of complicated court procedure and unnecessary delays before trials.

The result, it was said, is that youths from 16 to 21, only an eighth of this country's population, constitute a fifth of its criminals.

"Thorough education in crime in reform schools and prisons" was held responsible for the fact that 30 per cent of the Nation's killers had previous records—"because crime was no accident to them but the result of their outlaw careers."

Howard U. Cast Presents Opera, 'Faust'

By Edward Lawson.

School of music of Howard University's production of "Faust," grand opera in five acts by Charles Gounod, libretto founded upon Goethe's tragedy, at Armstrong High School auditorium.

—THE CAST—

Faust .....Timothy Ward
Marguerite .....Ruth Logan
Mephistopheles .....Arthur Davis
Valentine .....William P. Robinson
Siebel .....Geraldine Patterson
Martha .....Berenice Norwood
Wagner .....Bryant Walker
Premieres danseuses—Ada Fisher, Alma Hall, Phyllis Bailey, Rose Ann West
Premiers danseurs—Davis Lee; Raymond Glasco
Conductor .....Kai de Vermond

Devotees of the opera in goodly numbers attended the first rendition of Gounod's "Faust" by the school of music of Howard University last night in the Armstrong High School Auditorium, and were rewarded by a spirited and sustained performance, technically competent and dramatically effective.

Timothy Ward, tenor, heard to good effect last season in "Il Trovatore," demonstrated exceptionally good taste in the title role. His is a lovely lyric voice exhibiting emotional sensitiveness and suotlety of color. Outstanding, however, was the "Marguerite" of Ruth Logan, who exhibited an amazingly clear soprano, and a fine command of the language of the libretto.

Arthur Davis, as a bronzed Mephistopheles, gave promise of a coming operatic light, his superior vocal qualities in the first and final acts, lifting the grand opera to its true dramatic level. As "Valentine," brother of Marguerite, William Peters Robinson, displayed commendable stagemanship and a rich barytone voice which met favor and merited applause.

Male choruses were drawn from the university glee club under direction of Roy W. Tibbs, and shared credit for good supporting performance with the orchestration, both showing good results of the years of study preceding the difficult operatic rendition.

The opera was conducted by Kai de Vermond, formerly of the Chicago Opera, in authoritative fashion. He was ably assisted by James W. Butcher, jr., stage manager; Senia Solomonoff, choreography and ballet master; Lulu V. Childers and Lillian Mitchell, directors, and Loula Vaughn Jones, assistant conductor and concert master.

A technical staff, members of the faculty, and a student staff, beyond the prosenium, served to make the performance a meritorious educational project, to be produced again tonight with Vivian Collier as Marguerite, James W. Butcher as Valentine, Mary Boulware as Siebel, Viola Manzilla as Martha, and the remainder of the cast intact.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Roth String Quartet (Feri Roth, Rachmael Weinstock, Julius Shaier and Oliver Edel) in Coolidge Auditorium on Friday night. Program: Quartet in D major, Op. 76, No. 5 (Haydn), Quartet in G minor, Op. 33, No. 5 (Boccherini), Quartet in D major, Op. 11 (Chaikovski).

It was with three new associates that Feri Roth made his appearance last evening in crowded Coolidge Auditorium for the first of two concerts which constitute the final offering of the season by the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress. Jeno Antal had been replaced by Rachmael Weinstock, Ferenc Molnar by Julius Shaier, and Janos Scholz by Oliver Edel. This radical renovation of personnel has inevitably resulted in a change in the quality of performance, and time will be required for the organization to resemble the Roth Quartet that we have known. Moreover, the musicians had warmed up the Stradivarius instruments from the Whittall collection only the day before, and there were some flaws of tone.

BROWN

Nevertheless there was a marked consentience between the new players and their chief, and it is quite evident that the standard of artistry has not been affected by the changes. The reading of Haydn's familiar D major quartet from Opus 76 was thoroughly vitalized, sentiently phrased and emotionally projected. The lovely Largo movement, so anticipatory of Beethoven's brooding manner, had a particular eloquence communicative in its effect.

Haydn's Italian contemporary, Boccherini, was represented by the G minor quartet from Opus 33, a work 19 years older than the Haydn quartet which had preceded it. The more one hears of Boccherini's music, the more one is convinced that his merits are greater than we have been allowed to know because he has been so consistently shouldered into the background. Only a few of his 500 compositions have ever reached our concert halls, and those few have always repaid the hearing.

The last item on the program was the "Andante Cantabile" quartet by Chaikowski, which I did not stay to hear, not only because it has become as familiar as the tale of the ancient mariner, but also because another concert was awaiting notice.

Eva Whitford Lovette conducts the thirteenth annual spring concert of the Lovette Choral Club Friday night in the Italian Garden room of the Mayflower Hotel. Guest soloist: William Truesdale Cameron, harpist. Club soloist: Nellie Barber Brooks, soprano.

A capacity audience in the Italian Garden room of the Mayflower Hotel testified last evening to the popularity of the Lovette Choral Club, which appeared in its thirteenth spring concert under the direction of its permanent leader, Eva Whitford Lovette. This organization of women's voices has established a merited reputation for excellence in its field, and its singing was at the customary level of tonal freshness and trained precision.

The program, only the latter portion of which I was able to hear, was well chosen and varied. Prominent among the compositions was a group of songs by contemporary composers: "Spring," by Elizabeth Merz Butterfield; "Brown Hills," by Nadine Moore, and "The Fountain," by Dorothy Radde Emery, of Washington. There were choral numbers by Gaines, William Arms Fisher, Jacobson, Hall, Johnson, Lizst, Charles Spross and Ivanovici.

Nellie Barber Brooks, a member of the club, had the honored place as soloist, contributing "Vissi d'arte" and Spross' "Robin, Sing Me a Song." The guest soloist, William Cameron, had two appearances—one in pieces for harp by Thomas, Rodgers and Bellotta, and the other in a group of his own compositions. In "Travel Rhapsody," "Chinese Impression," "Drifting Snow" and "Dragonfly" he made clever use of the tonal devices of the instrument.

I Company, Of Cardozo, Wins Drill

More than 20,000 witnessed the victory of Company I, Cardozo High School, Capt. William Mason commanding, yesterday at Griffith Stadium, in the forty-eighth annual competitive drill of the Twenty-fourth Regiment, Colored High School Cadets.

The competition, between ten cadet companies, began early in the morning, and concluded at 5 o'clock with a regimental review by Supt. F. W. Ballou, Assistant Supt. Garnet C. Wilkinson, and members of the Board of Education.

Winners of second and third honors were Company B, Dunbar High School, Capt. Ashton Robinson commanding, and Company A, Dunbar, commanded by Capt. Roy Ellis. Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded the winning captains by Benjamin Washington, winner of the first company competition in 1893; by John H. Wilson, member of the Board of Education, and by John H. Pinkett.

The victory was the second consecutive one for the Cardozo Business High School, giving that institution two legs on the Teachers' diamond medal award, which will be made to the school winning three successive annual competitions.

Judges of the contest included the following:

Senior judge, Lieut. Col. Larkland F. Hewitt, Massachusetts National Guard; junior judges, Capt. R. A. Williams, New Jersey National Guard, and Capt. Roscoe C. Clayton, assigned to Howard University; alternate judge, Lieut. Leroy A. Clay.

The roster of the winning company, all members of which were awarded blue ribbons, was as follows:

Capt. William Mason. First Lieut. Norris Berry. Second Lieuts. George Nelson and Clarence Beverly.

Bata Is Fined $8,000 Under Wage-Hour Act

Md. Shore Firm Guilty Of Overtime Work Without Proper Pay

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 17.—The Bata Shoe Co., Czecho-Slovakian firm located at Belcamp, Md., pleaded guilty today to violating the Wages and Hours Act by working its employes overtime without proper compensation, and was fined $8,000.

United States Judge W. Calvin Chesnut suggested that evidence might be offered to show the company was innocent, but the defendant declined.

The amount of the fine was agreed upon between the company and United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, who made the allegations.

John Hosa, manager of the Belcamp plant, was made the defendant. Jan Bata, head of the firm, was not in court.

Hosa and the company were charged specifically with working employes more than 42 hours a week without paying overtime, and failing to keep proper records.

Beverly R. Worrell, Washington attorney representing the Wages and Hours Administration, told Judge Chesnut the overtime compensation due the shoe company's 600 employes amounted to more than $10,000.

The case was brought before Judge Chesnut under a procedure permitting the United States attorney to make the charges in court without the formality of an indictment.

Noble Objects To Bill for Tax On Chain Stores

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department expressed opposition to the Patman chain store tax bill yesterday, contending that it would add new burdens to business, and listed seven specific objections.

Edward J. Noble, Acting Secretary of Commerce, in a letter to Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of the House Ways and Means Committee, said that the bill was not favored by farmers, consumers or "any substantial group of fair-minded businessmen."

The bill would impose a graduated scale of taxes on interstate chain stores which would be multiplied by the number of States in which such organizations operate.

The letter, made public by Doughton, listed these objections:

1. It proposed "the most extreme use yet suggested" for the taxing power, not to raise revenue but to prohibit interstate business.

2. It would add "a most vicious barrier" to legitimate interstate trade.

3. It would raise the cost and lower the standard of living of consumers with lowest incomes.

4. It would destroy the business of those who have promoted distribution short cuts without reference to unfair or oppressive practices.

55. It is "fallaciously supposed" to increase employment, but would not do more than shift employment and probably would result in less continuity and lower standards of employment.

6. It would prevent mass production from yielding its greatest benefit through mass production on a national scale.

7. It "opens the door for legislation penalizing all interstate businesses when intrastate sellers desire freedom from competition."

Thomas J. Weeks Funeral Monday

Spills and Thrills Keep Crowd on Toes As Washington Horse Show Opens

Meadowbrook Show Ground a Gay Sight With Atmosphere of a County Fair; Many of City's Social Lights Attend

By Carolyn Bell

Those who are a bit vague about singlefooters, hunter hacks and what not had better seek cover. With spills and thrills enough to keep the crowd on its toes, the three-day Washington Horseshow got off to a good start yesterday.

Junior League-sponsored, the show drew a goodly crowd of the town's social lights. Conspicuous by their absence, however, were the usual number from the Diplomatic Corps.

Fair weather smiled on the harassed directors, so things ran smoothly. It was a gay sight—the Meadowbrook show ground—circled in newly-green trees. Something of a country fair atmosphere prevailed. Junior Leaguers in casual green smocks hawked cigarettes, candy bars and pop. The long white buildings, where a buffet luncheon was served, and where several smart shops displayed their goods, sported candy-striped awnings in red and white. Umbrellas in merry colors topped tiny green tables where the spectators ate luncheon.

Just inside the doorway, Mrs. James Hamilton "Gypsy" Lewis held forth as fortune teller. Mrs. Lewis eschewed gypsy garb for a trim dark blue suit, but the tent was there as well as the cards. Diminutive Marilynn Himes rode jauntily about in a tiny pony cart.

Preferring the "railbird" status was Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke, of Tuxedo Park, who sat on the newly whitewashed fence and watched her entries. Somewhat aloof from the crowd, pretty, blonde Mrs. Duke was dressed in riding togs, topped by a black and white checked coat. Dark glasses completed the ensemble.

The retiring Minister of Thailand, accompanied by Mme. Rajamaitri, was one of the few members of the Diplomatic Corps present. Mme. Rajamaitri wore a navy blue chalked-striped ensemble topped by a white baku hat curled up on both sides and trimmed in a polka-dot band. They were the guests of Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell, who entertained at a dinner party in their honor last night. Another guest in the box was Mrs. John Creighton, who leaves tomorrow to join her husband on the West Coast, whence they will sail for Peking, where Commander Creighton will be Naval Attache. Mrs. Creighton attended the dinner last night also.

Frau Thomsen Attends Show

Frau Thomsen, attractive wife of the German Charge d'Affaires, attended the show. Riding all morning, Frau Thomsen turned up looking no end smart in a tiny dark hat trimmed with a huge pink cabbage rose. In the box with her were Mrs. Hugo Fisher, Mrs. W. G. Bond, Mrs. Paul Anderson, Mrs. William Semmes and Mrs. Robert Shorter.

In well-fitting riding togs, Mrs. "Chip" Robert chatted with circus man John Ringling North. Arriving together were Stephen Elkins and debutante Ellen Flowerree, whose pale-blue ensemble was topped by a gray coat trimmed in fox. They found seats in the box with Miss Louise Stillwell and Canfield Himes. Dr. and Mrs. "Pete" Moran were there, she wearing a smart gray redingote from which peeped a polka dot frock. Miss Mary Senate Howes wore a jacket of lipstick red, and tiny calot perched back on her head.

Mrs. Baker Presents Trophy

Mrs. Lawrence Baker, smart in purple silks, presented a trophy in one of the classes. She was in the same box with Miss Cecil Lester Jones, retiring president of the Junior League. Not far away was Hubbert Quinter, in brown Harris tweeds, acting as one of the directors. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Waggaman were there, she in a beige and white plaid ensemble. Chatting with Maj. and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, jr. was Mrs. Frank Allen, in a green smock.

An interested trio consisted of Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, wife of the Third Secretary of the British Embassy, in a fetching turquoise linen frock trimmed in ric-rac; Mrs. F. Moran McConihe and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios. Still others there included Miss Billie Gruman, Miss Peggy Tinker, Mrs. Atherton McCondray, and Mrs. M. Webster Dawley. Up from Virginia were a number of horse-lovers who gathered on a mound opposite the show ring. Among them were Mrs. W. Hogan Perry, of Charlottesville; Miss Judy Molter, of Upperville, and Mrs. George Greenhalgh, sr.

Elizabeth Fish Feted at Party By Rep. Keans

Representative and Mrs. Robert Kean and their daughter, Miss Beth Kean, entertained last evening at a buffet supper and dance in honor of Miss Elizabeth Fish, debutante daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish.

Guests numbered more than 50, mostly of the current debutante set. Following the supper, the groups danced to Sidney's orchestra.

Miss Thompson, Dr. Guthrie Wed

The wedding of Miss Margaret Anne Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Thompson, of Duluth, Minn., to Dr. Nobel W. Guthrie, son of Dr. Thomas C. Guthrie, of Smithville, Ark., took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Dr. Riley Guthrie, uncle of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Guthrie. The Rev. George M. Cummings officiated.

Only close friends of the couple witnessed the ceremony, after which Dr. and Mrs. Guthrie left on a brief wedding trip. On their return they will live at the Roosevelt. Dr. Guthrie is an assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

Informal Party For Rajamaitris

Though the retiring Thai Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri were the guests of honor at the party given last evening by Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, protocol went overboard and informality was the keynote.

The guests were asked to come in sports clothes and tennis matches were organized on Mrs. Cowell's court. Another attraction was dancing to the music of a small orchestra. Supper was served at small tables in the garden.

Sharing honors with the Rajamaitris was Mrs. John Creighton, who is renewing aquaintances here before leaving for China, where her husband, a naval officer, has been ordered for duty.

Before they were ordered to California last summer, Commander and Mrs. Creighton spent several years in Washington. The former is now in Honolulu, where Mrs. Creighton will join him after a visit to Charleston, S. C. While here she is the house guest of Mrs. Cowell.

The Hunt Country

The Breckinridges Honor Lucy Proctor And Fiance, Aldridge Dudley, Jr., at Supper

DR. AND MRS. J. Breckinridge Bayne gave a large buffet supper last night at their home on Belmont road in Washington in honor of an attractive engaged couple—Miss Lucy Bayne Proctor, of Oxon Hill, Md., and Aldridge Dudley, jr., of Middleburg. A number of Mr. Dudley's friends from Middleburg attended the function.

The widely feted pair will be honored again on Sunday afternoon, when Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson will entertain at "Wellington, their home on the Potomac River near Alexandria. Miss Proctor and Mr. Dudley will be married June 1.

THE TABLES are turning down this way today. Instead of Washingtonians coming to the hunt country to see a horse show, the local gentry is flocking to the Capital for the Junior League show at Meadowbrook. They are particularly interested in this afternoon's Gay Nineties class, of which Mrs. Marshall Exnicios is chairman.

Miss Deborah Rood, of Wilmington, who is assisting in managing the show this year, is an able worker and has rounded up all her Virginia friends. Among the exhibitors are Norman Haymaker, manager of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's stables, who will show some of her best horses; Ernest Redmon, Freddy Warburg, and Christopher Greer.

ALSO MRS. James C. Hamilton, of Warrenton, Mrs. Cary Jackson, of Keswick; Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Marsteller, of Manassas; Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggen Perry, of Cobham; Randle's Stables and Martin Macy, of Warrenton. Miss Elizabeth Lloyd, of Charlottesville; George Lee, of Norfolk; Dr. Lewis N. Allen, of Berryville; Arlington Hall College and the Fort Myer Horse Show team, which always thrills the crowd.

Among the Washingtonians working for the success of the show in Virginia are Mrs. Lawrence Baker, of Baker's Acres; Mrs. Louis E. Jeffries, jr., and Mrs. Lee Boatwright.

BY THE WAY—this column owes an apology to Ernest Redmon, of Middleburg. In all accounts of the Unison-Bloomfield Horse Show last week it was said that Mrs. Whitney's Faithful Heart won the Model Hunter class, when it was really Mr. Redmon's wonder horse, Royalty. The management of the show gave out the wrong information.

MRS. H. TELLER ARCHIBALD has arrived at her estate near The Plains from Florida and will spend the spring and summer here. Last week she had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. James S. Kemper, who are living in Washington since his recent election as head of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Kemper comes originally from Virginia and their old home, Cedar Hill, is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winmill, who have changed its name to Clovelly. Mr. Kemper is a cousin of William ("Billy") Kemper, who is special assistant to Gov. Price of Virginia.

Brazil Attache And Wife Give Garden Party

Diplomatic Set Attends Gay Fete Of De Araujos

Diplomats of warring nations pretended not to see one another yesterday at the cocktail party given by the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Senora de Araujo.

The hostess is an Englishwoman—her husband was stationed in London during most of the last war. Among the guests were Capt. L. C. A. St. J. Curzon-Howe, Naval Attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Anthony Coleby, who is married to the Assistant Naval Attache. Also on hand but mutually invisible were Admiral Witthoeft-Emden, of the German Embassy and his American wife, and Mme. Lombard, whose husband is Military Attache of the French Embassy.

Party Held On Lawn

The Araujos live in a very American house—white shingles—out on Macomb street. The party took place on the large lawn outside of the residence, with 100 invited. A bar and buffet were set up, and lavish platters heaped with stuffed eggs, ham and biscuit, and piping hot sandwiches were handed around.

The hosts received in the living room, Senora de Araujo wearing a floor-length frock of black moire with a tiny peplum and a corsage of bright red roses.

Early arrivals were the Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi.

Navy Folk Predominate

Latin American diplomats, American naval officers and naval attaches from other embassies and legations were in the majority. The entire Brazilian Embassy staff was present, headed by the Ambassador and attractive Senhora de Martins, who wore a broad-brimmed brown hat with her brown and white polka-dotted dress.

The Mexican Ambassador was accompanied by Senora de Castillo Najera and their daughter, Irma. Another family group included Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Morris, jr., and the latter's father, Gen. Frederick Boschen.

The Ecuadorean envoy, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Admiral Walter S. Anderson, Capt. and Mrs. Jules James, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lolita Dawson, who were en route to another party given by the Peruvian Counselor and Senora de Garland; Mrs. Lelia W. Bathon, were others at this large and gay party.

English Speaking Union Will Fete Eric Underwoods

Eric Underwood, of London, author, lecturer and Oxford scholar, and Mrs. Underwood will be honor guests at a tea to be given by the English Speaking Union on Monday from 4:30 to 6 in the clubrooms, 1107 Sixteenth street.

Mr. Underwood will speak on "The Powers That Be in England," describing leading figures in and behind the government, many of whom are his personal friends.

Hostesses at the tea will be Mrs. James Oliver Murdock, Mrs. Laura Field Cheatham, Mrs. James Gaven Field, Mrs. George M. Morris, Mrs. Abbot Mills, Miss Bertha Noyes, Mrs. Arthur Nash, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mrs. Raymond Lee Wolven, Miss Grace E. Fox, Mrs. Everad Robinson Todd, Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, Miss Edna Vosper and Miss Winifred Whitney.

Miss Biggone, Bride-Elect Is Given Surprise Shower

Miss Margaret Biggone, whose marriage to James Echols will take place in June, was the guest of honor at a surprise shower on Thursday night given by her former classmates at Immaculate Conception Academy.

The party was given at the home of Mrs. Paul A. Clifford in Edgemoor, Md. Miss Biggone is the daughter of Mrs. Lillian Biggone.

Belgian Envoy Hears Soldier Son, Charles, Is Safe

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz have been cheered by the receipt of a cable from their son, Charles, who is with the army. It reports that he is safe despite the fierce fighting now raging in Belgium.

Young Charles left Washington over a year ago to do his military service. He remained when the war broke out and was in Brussels when the invasion occurred.

Mme. Horinouchi Is Ranking Guest

Mrs. Emil Hurja entertained at a small luncheon yesterday at her home in California street. Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was ranking guest.

A low bowl of white tulips and pink snapdragons centered the table, at which covers were laid for 12. After luncheon, guests had coffee on the sunny terrace to the rear of the Hurja home.

Eugenia Merrill To Bow June 11

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill will present their daughter, Miss Eugenia Merrill, to society at a garden party on Tuesday, June 11, at their residence on Belmont road. Invitations to the function, which will be from 5:30 to 7:30, have just been issued.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The United States Ambassador to Spain, Alexander Weddell, arrived in New York aboard the liner Roma Thursday. He is on leave and is accompanied by Mrs. Weddell.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Blair have canceled the tea which was to be given tomorrow at their home in Virginia, because of illness in the family.

Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim gave a cocktail party yesterday in celebration of the former's birthday.

Col. and Mrs. Sloane Doak, of Ruxton, Md., are here to attend the Junior League Horse Show and are stopping at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Adams, of Ormond Beach, Fla., have leased an apartment at the Wardman Park for the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Chaplin, of Hillbrook Farm, Haverford, Pa., are at the Mayflower after spending the winter and early spring in Boca Grande, Fla.

Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith is in Memphis, Tenn., visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Newton Stern. Before returning she will be joined for a week by Mr. Goldsmith.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry King, whose marriage took place during the winter, are occupying their new apartment at the Westchester.

Mrs. Reuben Sworzyn has returned from visits in Toledo and Cleveland, Ohio.

Lawrence Bakers Give Party For Horse Show Exhibitors

Gay Postlude to First Day of Junior League's Gymkhana Held at 'Baker's Acres;' Army Team Stars Today

A gay postlude to the first day of the Junior League Horse Show was the informal supper party given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker.

The affair, which was buffet, was held at Baker's Acres, their home on Foxhall road. Honor guests were out-of-town exhibitors, with a sprinkling of Washingtonians. Among the "local talent" present were Miss Cecil Lester Jones, president of the Washington League, and Mrs. John Selby, chairman of the Horse Show.

Belle of the evening was blond Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke, of Tuxedo, N. Y., the former Miss Priscilla St. George. She had several entries in the show.

The Fort Myer Horse Show team will perform this afternoon, and from the Army post across the river came Col. and Mrs. A. W. Ross, Lieut. David Wagstaff, Capt. and Mrs. J. B. Quill, Capt. and Mrs. Robert Dewey, Lieut. and Mrs. James H. Polk, Capt. and Mrs. Charles B. McClelland, Capt. and Mrs. William H. Collier, Lieut. Col. W. C. Crane and Mrs. O. K. Kane.

Among others present were Miss Deborah Rood, Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, Cobham, Va.; Mrs. Cary Jackson, Keswick, Va.; Miss Anne Miller, Long Island; Dr. L. M. Allen, Winchester; Miss Elizabeth Lloyd, Charlottesville; Robert S. Waters, Johnstown, Pa.; Miss Nancy Marie Shaw, Chester Springs, Pa.; Harry Jonas, Richmond, and Miss Patricia Bolling, Greenwich, Conn.

Also Frederick Warburg, Middleburg; Miss Betty Couzens, Pontiac, Mich.; Mrs. George Watts Hill, North Carolina; Mrs. James C. Hamilton, Warrenton; Miss Peggy Carpenter, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Mrs. C. M. Greer, jr., Upperville, and Mrs. James Sexton, Bryn Du Farm, Ohio.

Daughter Born To R. G. Duffeys

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph G. Duffey, of Warrenton, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Wednesday at the Doctors Hospital here.

Mrs. Duffey is the former Miss Viola Winmill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, of New York and Warrenton.

4 Dinner Parties Slated in Capital In Next Few Weeks

Several dinner parties are scheduled for the next few weeks as the gayest late spring season in years approaches its climax.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts have invitations out for dinner on Saturday, June 1. Mrs. George Marye will be hostess on Friday evening, May 31, in her apartment at 1785 Massachusetts avenue, and Gen. and Mrs. William Conner will entertain at the Chevy Chase Club on Thursday, May 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios will give a dinner on Monday, May 27, at the 1926 F street club. Mr. and Mrs. Exnicios will leave the first week in June to attend the Bankers Conference in Hot Springs, Va.

The Gibbonses Here For Brief Visit

Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons have arrived in Washington after spending the season at Palm Beach, and are staying at the Sulgrave Club. They do not plan to open their home here as they are en route to their summer residence in Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham Glasgow have left the Mayflower after a visit here and are now at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Woman Tells Value of Foresighted Domestic Design When Mother-in-Law Lives With Married Couple

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem of "D. I. E."—whose mother-in-law lives with her and goes everywhere she goes with her husband—is so similar to one which my husband and I are trying to solve that I thought she might like to hear how we are dealing with the difficult situation.

First, let me indorse your statement that hardly anything constructive can be done unless the wife has her husband's full cooperation. But even though I have always had this cooperation, we found there was little we could do until we made several changes in the domestic set-up.

We have been married for three years and my mother-in-law has lived with us most of that time. Recently she has been away for several months, but she is expected back this week. During her absence we have effected the changes aforementioned, and are looking forward confidently to a much happier situation—even though the changes represent considerable material sacrifice. But so far as we are concerned, material possessions have value only in relation to the happiness they bestow.

We have moved into a new home which gives us two bedrooms on the first floor and a large room upstairs. This room has been furnished studio fashion, so that while it has the appearance of a comfortable living room, it is also a bedroom. It has a small radio and we took the precaution of settling in a neighborhood where restaurants are within easy walking distance, so that she can go out for dinner and a movie sometimes when we are entertaining a few of our own friends at home, as we do occasionally.

We have written her in the friendliest spirit, explaining what we have done and, saying that we believe it will be better for all of us to lead our own lives as much as possible, even under the same roof; and that we think it is not necessary to spend every evening together in a threesome.

In the earlier arrangement, the bedrooms were all on the same floor, and my mother-in-law regarded her room simply as a place to sleep and spent most of her time in the living room, where she seemed especially to enjoy the radio.

Even before she went away on her trip, I had resigned my office job and now that I am staying at home I find that I am not so tired and irritable and that the household machinery is running much more smoothly, although of necessity much more economically. We have settled the vacation question by acquiring a cat and a dog. We have asked her to return at a specific date so that someone will be here to look after the animals while we are away. She said she was glad to cooperate and expressed pleasure at being able to do this for us.

It is almost impossible, as I have learned during the past three years, to change habit-patterns that have been unconsciously formed during the course of a long life. Any woman who has been the head of her own household and accustomed to being the center of attention cannot quickly adapt herself to a secondary position in the home. Therefore, even though the younger generation feels that its elders have "lived their lives," and should concede the same privilege to their offspring—still, we youngsters have a responsibility to create situations which make it easier for them to live with us on our terms.

We must make it possible for them truly to feel that there are many things they can do for us that no one else can do so well; and we must show our appreciation of the cooperation they extend. As you have said, the husband's cooperation is the first essential to a happy adjustment to the "mother-in-law in the home" situation. And I am grateful that I have always had this cooperation to the fullest extent, and glad to know that my husband loves his mother as much as ever.

In conclusion, I want to say that I enjoy your daily advice and have profited from it in the past. With best wishes for your con-continued success, I am, sincerely,

S. C. C.

Should Married Woman Act as "Bridesmaid?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My brother is to be married next month in another State. They are having a church wedding and I am planning to go. I have just received a letter from his fiancee asking me to be one of four bridesmaids. I know little about big weddings, as mine was a quiet home affair, but I was under the impression that bridesmaids always are unmarried friends of the bride.

I am 35 and the mother of two children. Can it be that she is asking me just because she feels she should, since I am his sister? She is 30 years old. Is it customary for married women to be bridesmaids? Would I have any duties and obligations other than attending her at the wedding in case I accept? PUZZLED.

"Bride's Attendant" Is the Newer Term

DEAR PUZZLED: It is considered gracious good form for a bride to include women members of her bridegroom's family in her wedding party—even though she has not previously met or known them, and even though they may be married. The term "bridesmaid" is not so commonly used nowadays as "bride's attendant"—primarily because there is a growing tendency to muster young matrons into "attendants'" roles. And why not?—since the average thirtyish matron today usually is quite as decorative as her younger, unmarried sisters.

Your "duty or obligation" as the bride's attendant would be to buy your costume out of your own dress allowance—after checking with the bride to learn how she wants you to dress. The bride (or her family) furnishes such flowers as her attendants may carry, and usually she gives each attendant a gift as a souvenir of the occasion. My advice to you is to accept the invitation in the spirit of friendly affection in which it was extended; and welcome the chance to beglamorize your appearance for a day.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Women Are Pondering The Serious Problems Of Democratic System

New York, May 17.

SUDDENLY the women around here, and eke the toddlers, are pondering and then speaking on the serious problems of the democratic system. And well they may. So should we all. The other day Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, first vice president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, told a large audience that many women had told her that, given the chance, they'd vote for a dictatorship tomorrow. This drew a mighty wave of well-modulated gasps from the crowd.

ALICE HUGHES

Simultaneously, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and an audience heard children of school age address the forum on democratic matters. Elsie Reardon was the smash hit. "When you disagree with a person," said erudite Elsie, "instead of socking him in the eye, let's go home and look up the correct answer. Then you can decide who gets the sock in the eye." Well, that is probably as succinct a bit as I ever heard on the theory, and it would be unkind to hint that eye socking might start ove rthe correctness of the answers in the book.

There isn't an American worthy of the name who wouldn't sock every hostile eye in reach in defense of his liberty. Personal freedom, under reasonable legal restraint, is the most priceless possession of man, and no one ever quite realizes it until one sees millions of people living under the horrible dictatorship of endless terror. I saw it in Russia, and it nearly broke my heart and spirit. When we left, spouse Hall kissed the exit visa on his passport, and meant it.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Oh, these girls. Here's one of my friends. Her name was Amelia Miles, and she is petite, pretty, with red hair and fine dimples. At 30, working for a fashion magazine, she decided she just wasn't getting to first base. So she up and quit, took her savings and lit out around the world. She wanted to travel. Well, the other day Amelia came home, with a new last name, Steel. She'd found the nice husband in Calcutta, India. His work called him here for a spell, and the little wife is radiant. Soon they'll be off to Australia on business. And is she happy at having tossed off that $50-a-week-job and gone adventuring? One look would tell you. But could we all have such luck? Maybe—if we had her nerve.

I saw Helen Jacobs, the tennis star, the other day. She's moved out to Forest

Orange Trylon Dish

With Mint Accent

CARROTS have been credited with making hair curly, making it red, and even making it grow. Whether they are a beauty aid is problematic, but it is known that they are full of carrotene, which is one way of getting vitamin A, as well as mineral salt.

When you select carrots at market do it carefully. Beware of the shriveled, wilted ones with a flabby look, for they will lack flavor. Instead buy the firm, smooth, well-shaped ones of good color and crisp, green tops.

Carrot concoctions, whether served raw or cooked, have many merits. Raw carrot sticks are fine for munching; grated raw carrots are splendid in salads. Glazed mint carrots are an appealing vegetable dish. The following is a recipe for making them:

Glazed Mint Carrots—Wash and scrape 12 medium-sized carrots. Dice. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Heat 4 tablespoonfuls fat in frying pan. Add carrots, 6 sprigs of mint cut fine, and ¼ cup sugar. Cook slowly until carrots are coated with sirup—about 15 minutes. Serves 6.

Job Prospects Better, Girl Graduates Told

Margaret Hutchinson, Personnel Expert, Gives Dress Tips

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHAT has Washington's little army of future business women in store when schools and colleges let out in June? Do these graduates stand a chance of landing the jobs they have dreamed of, or will "no help wanted signs persist every time they apply?

Marshall Adams

According to Margaret Hutchinson an expert in the personnel field, there will be no dearth of jobs this summer—provided the job-seeker pays fastidious care to first interview appearances. Despite war conditions and election year doldrums, Miss Hutchinson believes there are more jobs than perfect applicants. This personnel arbiter for ten years has guided the destinies of Strayer Business College students, and during that time has handled 10,000 jobs. In the last year 1,590 calls were cared for by Miss Hutchinson, who believes a similar number of office jobs will be available for the right girls this year.

Lists Qualifications

"Just what constitutes the right girl?" she was asked.

"Training and mental qualifications for the job naturally, but even more important is the initial personal appearance," was her reply. "The girl seeking a position today is not as great a perfectionist as the depression era girl, who, from 1932 to 1935, had such keen competition that she was forced into deeper social consciousness."

Miss Hutchinson believes that an applicant should know the difference between the right and the wrong "touches" in a costume. So strong is her conviction on this point that she presented a business girls' fashion showing at a local store Wednesday with Strayer students wearing the right and wrong clothes for job seeking. This presentation brought out the fact that Washington's working girls have sane budget sense, for, out of 20 representative business college grauates holding down their first jobs in private industry (at annual salaries of from $1,100 to $1,400) the average price range for office dress was not above $10.

Average Dress Costs

In fact, breaking down individual price specifications from $12.95 to $6.00, the usual office dress costs $9.75, evening gowns only slightly higher. Four office frocks are bought to one evening gown. Practically never is a date dress bought as such. Instead, basic business clothes are enlivened with lingerie, fresh flowers, costume jewelry and gay little hats for after-office fun. Cottons play an important part in Strayer girls' wardrobes, and it's an even 50-50 between pique suits, striped seersuckers, pastel chambrays and other washables, and hot weather sheers and dry cleanables.

Hats never run above $3.50, while shoes cost approximately $5.50 with about $10 going to the accessories for the season—gloves, bag, gadgets and underthings. In the matter of girdles, the business girl is a skimper, and Miss Hutchinson annually pleads with graduating students to pay more heed to foundations. She is amazed to discover that girdles are being bought as low as 59c apiece even though girls over size 16 need a higher priced girdle.

Beauty Secrets

Make-Up for Stripes

Summer fashions march behind a red and white striped flag. From pin stripes to inch-wide bands, these varying stripes may be seen in gay print dresses, neck ruffles or decking hats. New make-up ensembles, ranging from vivid red to soft pinks, add that bit of starch needed for the prevalent summer styles.

PEPPERMINT PINK—One of the newest shades, a clear pinkish-red was designed to wear with whites, misty pastels and fragile tones of ors. Both lipstick and rouge are to be had in this shade, and a harmonizing face powder. A big, round stick of peppermint candy is the unique way in which this beauty trio is presented to you.
this season's frankly feminine col-

CANDY CANE—A distinctive, gay red with just a hint of pink in it is a natural to use when wearing cotton frippery. Narrow stripes or candy red and white encircle the lipstick. A snuff box compact matches the lipstick case.

RED FLARE—A brilliant, deep red lipstick in keeping with fashions vivid martial moods, is in a case fashioned like a firecracker. This new sade of lipstick gives contrast to the natural bieges, grays and bright greens now being flaunted in both sports and dressy attire.

Nazis Cut Styles In 'Bras' to 10

Berlin (AP).—And n ow brassieres are being regimented in Germany.

There may be, hereafter, only ten types, whereas there used to be hundreds. Although German women are restricted as to selection, the choice, authorities assert, remains adequate.

The purpose, says the magazine Textiles, is to release machines for other tasks, and to save labor. Making 100 identical brassieres involves fewer motions than making 100 of varying designs.

Auto Deaths At All-Time Low Here

19 Traffic Fatalities Since First of Year As Against 31 for Same Period in 1939

By Howard F. Wentworth

An all-time low in traffic fatalities since the beginning of the year was announced last night by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Nineteen persons have been killed thus far in 1940 as against 31 for the same period last year. In the 17 years that accident records have been kept at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, there has not been a single instance when the death rate has been so low at the approach of midyear, Van Duzer reported.

April, with only one fatality, was the safest month since December, 1928, when no deaths were reported, he added.

Pedestrians Ahead

As in previous years, however, pedestrians continue to head the list of accident victims. This year, 16 of the persons killed were walking and only three were riding.

Careless walking habits were blamed by Van Duzer for the majority of pedestrian deaths. Crossing streets at places other than at crosswalks and against red lights accounted for the bulk of pedestrian fatalities, records show.

Elated over the current record, Van Duzer appealed for continued safety efforts, urging motorists and pedestrians to join his department and police in making 1940 a banner year in traffic.

Personal injuries also are on the downtrend, records revealed. 1,225 persons have been hurt in accidents since January 1 as compared to 1,308 for this time last year. Accident figures this year are running close to 1939, the count being 4,148 to date against 4,159 last year.

Stampede Death a Qundary

Traffic officials and the Coroner's office are at odds over the disposition of a fatal accident on Bladensburg road Wednesday when a Fort Myer soldier was killed as several horses stampeded. Police are carrying it in as an "incidental death," but the coroner insists it should be classified as traffic. The National Safety Council will be asked for an opinion before a decision is reached, Van Duzer declared.

Recent improvements at Thomas Circle and Union Station plaza have contributed to the general safety record, Van Duzer said. Since the Thomas Circle underpass was opened March 14, only one accident has been reported there and the plaza has seen only six mishaps since new lights were turned on February 20, he reported.

For the first time, Washington is now spreading anti-accident propaganda by street car posters. Several thousand placards with slogans and crash pictures are being used in street cars and buses.

N. P. Willis Funeral to Be Held Today

Masonic funeral services for Newton P. Willis, 53, of Windham, N. Y., will be at 11 a. m. today at the Hines funeral home, 3401 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Rock Creek cemetery.

Mr. Willis died Wednesday at Union Hospital, Elkton, Md., where he was taken Saturday with his wife, Mrs. Alice G. Willis, after their auto was in collision with another near Rising Sun, Md. They were on their way here to visit Mr. Willis' mother, Mrs. Charles H. Willis, on Mother's Day. Injured seriously, his wife was reported progressing favorably yesterday.

Surviving, besides his wife and mother, are a sister, Mrs. William E. Richardson, of Washington; a brother, Stanley D. Willis, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Merlow Allen, of Silver Spring, Md.

Tall Cedars Sprucing Up to March Today

10,000 Are Expected To Parade; Patrick, Hatch Address Dinner

A group of frolicking Tall Cedars who packed the ball room of the Willard Hotel last night were told by Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, that "we're the only major power in the world today where men and women can meet and have a good time."

Last night's dinner concluded a day of activities for members of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon Masonic affiliate, which included a tour of the White House where they were greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt, and a boat trip down the Potomac. Highlight today will be a parade along Constitution avenue from Fourth to Seventeenth streets.

Senator Hatch scored "all forms of government run by one man," He cited communism in Russia, Nazism in Germany, Fascism in Italy, and imperialism in Japan as "nothing more than tyranny."

"Now the lights of civilization may be blacked out in Europe," he declared. "But in the United States those lights are still ablaze."

Representative Patrick, of Alabama, told the group that "We ought to be glad we're on the pacific side of the Atlantic . . . If we can keep the man with three eyebrows from bustin' loose in this direction . . . we'll all be happy."

A program of music and entertainment followed the addresses. Supreme Tall Cedar Thomas C. Havell was toastmaster.

Numerous drill units and bands will participate in today's parade. Nearly 10,000 are expected to participate, officers of the organization reported last night.

At 10 a. m. today the Supreme Forest will convene for election of officers. A tour of public buildings will begin at 10.30 a. m., and arrangement of elected officers made at 11 a. m.

A patriotic pageant will be held by the organization at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, at 8 p. m. today. The thirty-eighth annual convention will close at 9 p. m. with a reception and dance in the ball room of the Willard in honor of the new officers.

Hit by Stray Bullet

Joseph McKeever, 20, janitor at the Ben Murch School, was treated at Providence Hospital yesterday for an ankle wound. A bullet from a small caliber gun was found there. McKeever said he was shot, while on the school grounds yesterday morning. He has no idea, he told police, who fired the gun, or whose the bullet came.

D. C. Fine Arts Commission 30 Years Old

Makes Anniversary By Approving Plans Of Marconi Statue

The Commission of Fine Arts yesterday commemorated the thirtieth anniversary of its establishment by approving projects and taking a number of others under advisement.

With Chairman Gilmore D. Clarke presiding, the commission:

Voted to locate the proposed memorial to Guglielmo Marconi at Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest.

Approved designs for shelter houses to be erected by the Capital Transit Co. at Rosslyn Plaza and Barney Circle.

Recommended that, in connection with the decoration of Federal buildings to be built in the future, artists commissioned to do sculptures and paintings work in close cooperation with the architects while the plans are being developed.

The bus and street car waiting rooms whose designs were approved are part of the scheme for beautification of Barney Circle, at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and the plaza on the Rosslyn side of Key Bridge.

The commission's new policy on Federal building decoration was adopted following a conference yesterday with W. E. Reynolds, commissioner, and Louis A. Simon, supervising architect, of the Public Buildings Administration.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary, said the Marconi Memorial will take the form of a sculptural group comprising a bust of the Italian inventor and a symbolic figure.

The Commission of Fine Arts was founded on May 17, 1910, with Daniel H. Burnham, architect for Washington's Union Station, as its first chairman. Daniel Chester French, sculptor of the Lincoln Memorial statue, succeeded him in 1912, serving until 1915. He was followed by Charles Moore, who relinquished the chairmanship to Clarke in 1937.

Forty-three noted painters, sculptors, architects and landscape architects have served on the commission since its establishment. Among them were Cass Gilbert, who designed the new Supreme Court Building; Frederick Law Olmsted, who was instrumental in reviving the L'Enfant Plan in 1901; Henry Bacon, designer of the Lincoln Memorial, and John Russell Pope, whose posthumous work is the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, now under construction.

Full Many a Memorial Will Blush Unseen If Ivy Growing Association's Plan Works Out

Formation of the Ladies Ivy Growing Association of America got under way at the meeting of the Fine Arts Commission yesterday.

Purpose of the association is to plant ivy around objects in Washington and elsewhere throughout the Nation, to enhance the artistic beauty of the United States.

Sponsor of the association is Edward Bruce, artist and lay member of the commission.

Mr. Bruce said the first thing to be done is to plant ivy—English, not poison—around the huge blocks of masonry from Memorial Bridge leading to the Lee Home. He feels the militant future members of his organization will support him in this.

Next, he proposes planting ivy around the Jefferson Memorial before it is finished so Washingtonians will never know it is there.

He also proposes quick action on the Mellon Art Gallery. Mr. Bruce considers the new gallery a menace to the Weather Bureau. When rain threatens the marble turns pink, he said.

He also suggests ivy plants around the statues of Gen. Thomas, William Jennings Bryan and Samuel Gompers.

Mr. Bruce has the support of

SECOND DIVISION WAR MEMORIAL
Cover This With Ivy?

the commission in some of these projects. Frederic Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and uncle of the President, is enthusiastic over some points of the agenda.

"I feel this proposal has national significance," said Mr. Bruce. "It should appeal to thousands of patriotic Washington women and the movement will spread. I would particularly like to plant ivy around all columns in Washington. The city now looks like a mausoleum."

Others point out that if enough ivy is planted in the proper spots it will be valuable from a standpoint of national defense as it will make the city hard to find from the air.

Washington citizens interviewed last night on the proposal included the flaming butcher knife with cabbages rampant on Constitution avenue, the statue on the Justice Building which is surrounded by tenpins, and many gentlemen on horses, as fit for concealment.

On all sides there was delighted support for the proposal.

The ivy will be supplied by the Park and Planning Commission, if the plans of Mr. Bruce work out. But on this point his conviction was not borne out by members of that worthy body.

New Abbot School Site Protested

Association Told Choice of Brentwood Area Would Ruin Only Natural Park

Selection of Brentwood Park as the site for the new Abbot Vocational School means the "ruination of that area for park purposes," members of the District Public School Association were told last night.

At a meeting in the District Building, the organization vigorously protested the Northeast site chosen by the Board of Education.

"Brentwood Park is the only natural park area the Northeast section of Washington possesses," said John W. Barse, "and a school erected there will destroy it for park purposes."

The 40-acre plot has already been cut into by roadways, other members declared. Otherwise the place has never been improved.

While the House voted in favor of the Brentwood site, the Senate has voted against it.

Adopting a resolution introduced by Miss Bede Johnson, the association commended Supreme Court Justice John E. McGeehan, of New York, who recently voided the appointment of Bertrand Russell, British philosopher and mathematician, to a position on the faculty of the College of the City of New York.

Takoma Park

Members of the Takoma Park D. C.-Maryland Citizens Association last night voted to appeal to Montgomery County officials to improve the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad overpass in North Takoma Park.

Lee R. Graybill, declarifg the bridge as it stands a traffic menace, expressed the belief that railway officials would cooperate should the county take the initiative.

The association commended the District Board of Education for its appointment of Thomas J. Holmes as principal of the new Calvin Coolidge High School.

Miss Grace B. Holmes, a teacher at Eastern High School, was elected president of the association to succeed Reed F. Martin. Other officers were chosen as follows: Mrs. Mary Lamont White, first vice president; Lee R. Graybill, second vice president; Walter Frey, secretary; Arthur S. Gordon, treasurer. Martin and Frey were elected delegates to the District Federation of Citizens Associations.

Capital News In Brief

Backs Into Trouble

Here's the first hit-and-run in reverse on the police records.

A car operated by an unidentified driver backed into the automobile of Charles A. Wise at 470 I street southwest last night. The driver jerked his car free, and then throwing it into reverse again, backed it over a curb, through a fence and onto a lawn. There he fled on foot.

Communion Mass

The annual communion mass of the District Chapter of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae will be held at 8 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthews Cathedral. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University, and national director of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, will be guest of honor at a breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel.

Members of the graduating classes of 1940 will be guests. Miss Mae Manogue will preside.

Norse Envoy Speaks

Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Norwegian Minister, spoke briefly last night at a meeting of the Norwegian Society at Temperance Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest. A program of songs and dancing followed. The gathering was to raise funds for war relief in Norway.

A. H. O. Rolle presided and Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, was among the guests of honor.

Assignments Announced By Archbishop

Most Rev. M. J. Curley Discloses Changes Effective May 31

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Washington and Baltimore, yesterday announced the following changes, effective May 31 (except as noted):

The Rev. Paul L. Norris, from St. Peter's, Washington, to pastorate of St. Lawrence's, Jessup, Md., effective January 26, 1940.

The Rev. Martin W. Hyland, from the Shrine of the Little Flower, Baltimore, to St. Peter's, Washington, as assistant.

Albert F. Jordon, superintendent of insurance, said the bill does not bar a person from buying insurance outside the District.

Lawrence C. Crawford, president of the Insurers Association, said that suggested amendments would "emasculate" the bill and subject District companies to unfair outside competition.

Senator McCarran asked that interested parties file briefs next week, after which the subcommittee would reach a decision.

Walter Would Cede D. C. Area to Maryland

A suggestion that residential and business areas of Washington be ceded back to Maryland so that residents might have the vote was received in Capitol Hill yesterday by Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Walter put forth the idea as chairman of a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee after Sidney R. Katz, of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, had testified in favor of a bill to abolish the poll tax.

Katz said that the latter legislation, which would affect eight Southern States, would have a "salutary" effect on the District's campaign for self-government.

Representative Walter expressed the belief that the Federal Government should retain only the part of the District needed for its own purposes.

300 Obsolete D. C. Laws Face Repeal

Some 300 obsolete District statutes, most of which go back to horse and buggy days, will be repealed if recommendations to date of the House Committee on Revision of Laws are adopted.

Representative Keogh (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the committee, yesterday introduced the third bill to eliminate outworn laws of the National Capital in connection with the work of his committee in revising the District Code.

The latest measure specifies 135 local statutes that are obsolete. An earlier bill listed approximately the same, whereas a bill was offered last summer to repeal a statute that dated back to colonial times. It authorized the King of England to summon justices before him when exceptions were filed to their decisions.

Tiger Cubs Die Despite Bottle Feeding at Zoo

Lacking a mother's love, both cubs born last week to the Zoo's pair of Bengal tigers, have died, Head Keeper William H. Blackburne sadly revealed yesterday.

The second succumbed Thursday, five days after the first, he said. They were the first young borne by the mother tiger and the first baby Bengals bred in Washington.

"In the first place," Blackburne explained, "the female was too young to become a mother. The little ones arrived prematurely. She was nervous and wouldn't feed them. We put the cubs to the bottle, but they were so weak it appeared hopeless from the start."

Sex Education Home Matter, Debaters Say

That a child should obtain his sex education in the home was the agreement of 16 members of the Census Bureau employes' debating society who met last night at the Commerce Department Building.

The group of 12 men and 4 women, who gathered to discuss the problem of compulsory sex education in the high schools, found they held almost as many divergent opinions as there were people present.

Agreeing that more adequate sex education is necessary in this country, and agreeing that theoretically it should take place in the home, the group pointed out that children are not educated at home. Whether education should not begin before high school and how to find properly trained teachers aroused lively discussion.

"It's obvious that parents are not doing their duty," said one of the members. "Nine out of ten children learn all they know on the streets. There has to be some central agency."

Howard Gurdki, chairman of the discussion, stated that the church is not well enough organized to undertake the problem, and said that the school is the logical place.

But I've seen rural localities where the teachers are young and poorly trained. It would be foolish to allow them to train children," said another.

2 Gas Light Employes Injured in Explosion

Two workmen at the machine shop of the Washington Gas Light Co., Eleventh and G streets southeast, were injured yesterday when a piston exploded. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital, where they gave their names as John Gienke, 55, 3615 Alton place northwest, and Peter Gross, colored, 50, 942 Virginia avenue southwest.

Caldwell Bows to Rise In D. C. Bill

Chairman of House Group, Accepting Senate Boosts, Asks Pledge Over Deficit

Chairman Caldwell, of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, yesterday indicated he will accept most of the Senate increases in the 1941 supply bill, providing municipal officials can convince him that the District will not go into the red.

"I realize there is a need for most of the appropriations added by the Senate, he said, "but the House went about as far as we thought it could go at the time.

"If the Commissioners want the increases, and the law permits the District to anticipate October income tax collections, I would not be disposed to object to them."

Representative Caldwell, who is serving both his first and last term as chairman of the District subcommittee, said he would ask the House to send the District bill to conference early next week.

The Senate added $1,406,173 to the House bill, but only about $1,000,000 would come out of the general revenue fund. The House had approved appropriations $600,000 in excess of actual revenue estimated for the fiscal year 1940.

Because the Senate subcommittee apparently exceeded anticipated October collections of the income tax, the House conferees are expected to insist on some reductions in the appropriations.

Senate increases of $208,000 for purchase of school sites and $48,000 for 25 additional policemen probably will meet objections from the House managers.

Changes Hinted In Insurance Bill

Probable amendment to a House bill providing for regulation of fire, marine and casualty insurance companies in Washington was indicated yesterday at a hearing conducted by a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said he had received many complaints because the legislation seeks to discourage the purchase of insurance policies from companies not licensed to operate in Washington. It imposes a tax of 50 per cent on the premium.

Albert F. Jordon, superintendent of insurance, said the bill does not bar a person from buying insurance outside the District.

Lawrence C. Crawford, president of the Insurers Association, said that suggested amendments would "emasculate" the bill and subject District companies to unfair outside competition.

Senator McCarran asked that interested parties file briefs next week, after which the subcommittee would reach a decision.

Walter Would Cede D. C. Area to Maryland

A suggestion that residential and business areas of Washington be ceded back to Maryland so that residents might have the vote was received in Capitol Hill yesterday by Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Walter put forth the idea as chairman of a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee after Sidney R. Katz, of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, had testified in favor of a bill to abolish the poll tax.

Katz said that the latter legislation, which would affect eight Southern States, would have a "salutary" effect on the District's campaign for self-government.

Representative Walter expressed the belief that the Federal Government should retain only the part of the District needed for its own purposes.

300 Obsolete D. C. Laws Face Repeal

Some 300 obsolete District statutes, most of which go back to horse and buggy days, will be repealed if recommendations to date of the House Committee on Revision of Laws are adopted.

Representative Keogh (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the committee, yesterday introduced the third bill to eliminate outworn laws of the National Capital in connection with the work of his committee in revising the District Code.

The latest measure specifies 135 local statutes that are obsolete. An earlier bill listed approximately the same, whereas a bill was offered last summer to repeal a statute that dated back to colonial times. It authorized the King of England to summon justices before him when exceptions were filed to their decisions.

Symphony Shy $31,000, Drive Extended Week

$76,000 Contributed Toward $107,600 Quota Set for Year

While National Symphony campaign workers still have $31,000 to raise before their goal is achieved, the annual sustaining fund drive is several thousand dollars ahead of last year's campaign for the corresponding period.

The drive for $107,600, scheduled to end Thursday, was extended to next Wednesday when a report showed a total of $76,000 contributed.

"Last year when the drive went into its extended period, $30,000 had to be raised to reach the goal," A. F. E. Horn, campaign chairman, said yesterday. "This year we have to raise less than $31,000. With the exception of two, each committee at the Thursday report luncheon showed a gain both in number of pledges and in contributions over the figures announced at the third report luncheon last year.

"Of course, we must not forget that $31,000 must still be raised before we can have concerts at the Water Gate this summer and in Constitution Hall next winter. And in view of the wonderful spirit shown by the people of Washington, I am confident that we will have the full $107,600 the orchestra needs by next Wednesday."

Vera Zorina the Brightest Star In 'I Was an Adventuress,' Capitol

Support Is Headed By Peter Lorre And Von Stroheim; Novelties on Stage

"I WAS AN ADVENTURESS." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Karl Tumberg, Don Ettlinger and John O'Hara, costarring Vera Zorina and Richard Greene, with Peter Lorre, Erich Von Stroheim, Sig Rumann, Fritz Feld, Cora Witherspoon, Anthony Kember Cooper, Paul Porcasi, Inez Palange, Egon Brecher, Roger Imhof and others. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. Previewed May 9. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

In "I Was an Adventuress," the current screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater, Director Gregory Ratoff has contrived to trick out a familiar story with many deft touches that make it agreeable, if not especially swift or noteworthy, entertainment.

BELL

It is the old fable of the upper-crust jewel swindlers, who employ the beautiful "Countess" Tanya Vronsky and a fraudulent "priceless heirloom" that has been in her family for generations" as the enticements to separate the richest men in the capitals of Europe from large sums of money. Unhappily, or happily, the "Countess" falls in love with and marries one of her victims, renounces the shady business in which she has played so important a part and turns to her favorite hobby of ballet dancing. The career of her predatory accomplices declines from that point on, while her own soars.

Twentieth Century-Fox and Mr. Ratoff were judicious in their selection of Vera Zorina, who recently decorated the stage of the National in "Louisiana Purchase," for the title role of their celluloid charade. In addition to being a Russian Ballet graduate, Zorina is a young actress who possesses more than a smattering of the rudiments of acting and great personal beauty and charm. Certainly, she never has been a lovelier vision than in her present vehicle.

Zorina's one ballet number is logically introduced and executed with imagination and grace. It is the "Swan Lake Ballet"—not to be confused with Pavlova's "The Dying Swan"—danced to music by Tschaikowsky. A competent ballet corps supports the star in this number, directed by her husband, George Balanchine. We agree with the view expressed by Zorina at the preview, that the "Swan Ballet" should have been photographed in Technicolor for fullest effect of its fantasy.

The principal supporting roles in the serio-comic periods of "I Was An Adventuress" are played by Erich Von Stroheim and Peter Lorre, with Richard Greene theoretically costarred with Zorina. Von Stroheim, a little thicker of neck and thinner of accent than formerly, is effective as the "brains" of the plunderbund and Lorre departs completely from his usual style as the dim-witted kleptomaniac who completes the trio. The handsome Mr. Greene has little to do but be handsome and desperately in love with his wife—which should have made this one of his easiest assignments.

The Capitol's "Spring Swing" stage revue introduces another pair of Arnaut Brothers, as those "Two Loving Birds;" Dean Murphy, in his accurate and rapid impersonations; J. Francis and J. Grey, two exceptional contortionistic dancers; Gloria Blake, a youthful coloratura, and that baffling "pickpocket," Dr. Giovanni, at a slight disadvantage due to the remoteness of the stage from the audience. The Rhythm Rockets, in several spectacular routines; Art Brown at the organ, Sam Jack Kaufman's overture and a war-drenched issue of the Movietone News complete a program that is dominated by Zorina.

Victims of Thievery—and Love!

VERA ZORINA AND RICHARD GREENE
as they are seen in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "I Was an Adventuress," now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Peter Lorre and Erich Von Stroheim, as two top-drawer swindlers, lead the supporting cast, which also includes Cora Witherspoon and Sig Rumann

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 17.

DURING THE LAST WAR Mrs. Aldous Huxley, then a Belgian refugee, came under the guidance of a titled British lady who decided to direct her education. She selected two distinguished pedagogues as the best tutors for the young girl, for she felt that these men had the best minds in Britain. Those two were Aldous Huxley and Bertrand Russell . . . The young refugee and Huxley became enamoured of each other, and were married . . . Mrs. Huxley, who now lives with her husband in California, has a niece whose career she has taken in hand. And although the two men who had moulded her mind—her husband and Bertrand Russell—reside in the same city in California, Mrs. Huxley is bringing her niece to New York next week, for schooling.

COVARRUBIAS, the Mexican artist, and Chavez, the Mexican musician, will work with Walt Disney in a movie about the Americas—an historic color-cartoon involving the Mayan tribe, the Incas, etc. . . . Mayor LaGuardia now is reconciled to a post in the third-term Cabinet, looking ahead to 1944 . . . Adolf A. Berle, jr., and Eleanor Roosevelt will address the ILGWU convention, at which a third term will be advocated . . . George Lowther, 3rd, of the Romeo & Juliet front-pages, will become a night-club host, for the new Pago-Pago Club on E. Fifty-fifth street.

JOHN STRACHEY, who was refused admittance into the country because he was accused of being a Red, has veered to the right—in his forthcoming book, "Program for Progress." In a letter to the publishers Strachey wrote: "Every line written in the London Daily Worker drives me to the conviction that those controlling it are prepared, for the sake of what they consider to be the interests of the Soviet Union, to give way to Hitler to any extent, and that they are utterly irresponsible as to the consequences to the British people of such unlimited giving away. So long as that remains the case I, and, it seems, everybody else in the country, can have nothing to do with them, however much we, like all sane people, 'do not want the war,' and however much we may agree with them as to the general character of the war."

WILL ROGERS' SON, James, will act as night club master of ceremonies at the Pegasus Club in New Jersey, on Saturday nights . . . Cafe Society, the Greenwich Village night club, will open an uptown branch on East Fifty-eighth street, on the premises formerly occupied by the Surf Club . . . Benny Davis and Harry Akst will write the new show for Ben Marden's Riviera

STELLA ADLER, distressed at dispatches from Europe, told her court at Sardi's Wednesday night: "Oh, if I only could be sure of continuing to live in a Great Democracy for the rest of my life. I swear, I'd do anything, if I could be sure. I'd pray, I'd be good, I'd be nice—I'd even be quiet." . . . Miss Adler, incidentally, helped stage the Molly Picon show, "Morning Star." On the eve of the opening, the producer gave her a check in part payment for her services. Miss Adler tore the check and threw it away, believing that the show didn't have a chance—and now it's a hit.

NEYSA McMEIN, the artist, once saw a horse named, "Neysa" entered in a race, liked the name, and adopted it. She also decided that she didn't like her birthday, selected the date she preferred, and has been celebrating her birthday on that preferred date for the past 15 years

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 17.

On the "Knute Rockne" set, Pat O'Brien and Albert Basserman were playing a scene in a Notre Dame chemistry lab, while a slender lady stood by, watching. Phone rang—O'Brien, as Rockne, answered it, shouted back to Basserman, "It's Bonnie! The baby! It's here!" I saw that slender lady's hand tighten, then relax. O'Brien and Basserman were acting, but Mrs. Bonnie Rockne was reliving her own life.

Eighteen movie actors, originally from the stage, put on a wonderful production of "Shadow and Substance" at the Pasadena Playhouse. Maroni Olsen, whom you'll see in "Brigham Young," directed. Cast included Charles Lane, Addison Richards, Victory Jory, and Dorothy Adams. My guess is you'll see and hear more of this group. They love the theater and are willing to work for it. . . .

John Wayne loves to act, too, but didn't enjoy himself last week while dodging real bullets from a sharpshooter on "The Long Voyage Home" se. The marksman peppered everything but John's head, had to use real ones. Bullet holes show up on the screen.

On that set, too, I saw a former prize fighter get kicked in the face and fall against the side of the boat. He got another extra to kick him while he practiced his falls. Each time his head hit, I thought it would be his end. Said so to Director John Ford, who replied, "All I'm afraid for is the boat."

When Lucius Beebe went to Ciro's the other night, he chatted with a beauty at the bar. Later, he asked Tim Durant who she was. "Marlene Dietrich" replied Tim. . . .

It looks kind of serious between Jean Cagney, Jimmy's sister, and Y. Frank Freeman, jr. . . .

And Ruth Hussey would have you know that romantically she's freelancing—and would like to remain that way, thank you!

What excitement United Airlines is having selecting ten girls out of 180 air hostesses for a six weeks dramatic training course at RKO! And the girl who wins, gets a prize—a contract at that studio. Formerly their career, besides airing, was matrimony.

'Oscar' Awards And 'Typhoon' Click at Earle

Dorothy Lamour, Bob Preston in Feature; Skelton Continues

By Richard L. Coe.

"TYPHOON." Paramount picturization in Technicolor of a story by Steve Fisher, adapted to the screen by Allen Rivkin, with Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, J. Carrol Naish, Chief Thunder Cloud, Frank Reicher, John Rogers, Paul Harvey, Norma Nelson and Jack Carson. Directed by Louis King. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

It's three home runs at the Earle this week. On the screen are "Typhoon," a farce with the fury of nature as its hero, and "Cavalcade of Academy Awards From 1928 to 1939," so memorable a scrapbook of the recent past that it leaves a lump in your throat, while on the stage there's Red Skelton to laugh your nostalgia away.

"Typhoon" is amusing and colossal in a restrained sort of way, but while you're listening we'd like first to tell you of that Academy Award Cavalcade. In its half-hour, this Warner Brothers release, supervised by Frank Capra, hits the high spots of film years that are still moist in the minds of most. "Oscar" himself, that exclusive statuette which goes to all winners in that alliance of arts dubbed "the movies," tells the story. Marie Dressler and Spencer Tracy got the soundest applause at the first showing, while scenes from "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Cavalcade," pictures of the now-retired Shirley Temple as a wee lass; Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney, before their first shaves, and the entire proceedings from the latest Academy dinner are bound to make you enthuse over the screen's youthful and prodigious power.

Is Dream-World Stuff

Dorothy Lamour, in a Technicolored sarong; Robert Preston, in a daze at the thought of so unique a nurse for a stunning hangover, and Lynne Overman, in complete perplexity at throwing over the Eastern race track to look for black pearls in the South Seas, are the human elements in the tale. Throaty-voiced Lamour has lived on the island since she was washed ashore as a child. She keeps house in a tree with an understanding ape. It's a quiet life and Dot properly calls it Paradise. Bob and Lynne happen by, a villain sets fire to the island and an obliging typhoon puts it out! Dream-world stuff, to be sure, but well enough conceived to conjure up pleasant thoughts on nature's fury that boasts more sanity than man's.

Miss Lamour has an appropriate lullaby, Preston achieves the huskiness of a younger Clark Gable and dry-witted Overman will make you laugh. But most of all you'll yearn for that South Sea isolation.

Skelton Scores Again

The resourceful Skelton is in his second and final week on the Earle stage before a Hollywood screen test. Whether he's mocking people in a drug store or kidding with amiable Edna Stillwell, "Red" is so refreshingly pleasant a comic that it would be a shame to have the films nab him away from the variety houses.

This being "King Cotton Week," Freddy Clark has written a good old Southland overture and the Roxyettes put on a fashion show of all the summer didoes. The six Hoffmans toss things about with careless abandon; Gower and Jeanne, who were in "The Streets of Paris," charm with youthful naivete in their dancing, and Lowe, Hite and Stanley continue to be the world's most perplexing trio to look at.

Paramount's newsreel contains much of the President's widely discussed speech before Congress Thursday afternoon. Assuming that you can pry into the theater, you'll find a generous bill to hold your interest. And don't miss that "Cavalcade of Award Winners."

'Sing for Your Supper' Makes Trio of Stars

The snappiest trio of songstresses who ever trilled their way into films with the same song, is the bevy who sang "Sing for Your Supper."

Unfortunately for the ears of alert listeners Muriel Angelus, Mary Martin and Virginia Dale did not sing their song together.

Muriel sang it first and to overflow theater crowds during the eastern stage run of "The Boys from Syracuse." By the time the film scouts had listened to Muriel they had that fetching blonde signed and sealed for screen delivery. But she doesn't sing in "Down Went McGinty," her next picture.

The red-headed Mary Martin made her own New York hit. Paramount's big city operatives voted enthusiastically for the showiness of Mary's figure and the little lady's lyrical loyalty to her Daddy; but when Mary came to Hollywood, incredulous others wished her to sing a song about something else besides where her heart belonged. Well, they heard Mary sing her own arrangement of "Sing for Your Supper." That clinched filmdom for Mary.

Some time still later, honey-tressed Virginia Dale turned up for a screen test of her own. Texas-born Mary warmed to North Carolina-reared Virginia, and Mary supplied Virginia with Mary's arrangement of "Sing for Your Supper."

Virginia sang it, Paramount signed her, put her into "Buck Benny Rides Again," and Virginia has been singing and supping happily ever since.

Metropolitan's Icebox-Thriller Stars Karloff

"Man With Nine Lives" Is Mystery Drama Of "Frozen Sleep"

"THE MAN WITH NINE LIVES." Columbia picturization of a story by Harold Shumate, adapted to the screen by Karl Brown, starring Boris Karloff, with Roger Pryor, Jo Ann Sayers, Stanley Brown, John Dilson, Hal Taliaferro, Byron Foulger, Charles Trowbridge, Ernie Adams, Jean Miller and Bruce Bennett. Directed by Nick Grinde. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Air conditioned and ethical murder predominates in "Man With Nine Lies." So there's none of that oppressive feeling usually associated with homicide, even if done in the most modern Karloff manner.

This time, our dear Mr. Karloff is a doctor again and his scientific obsession for finding a new way to save human lives naturally calls for a few human guinea pigs. Fortunately, the human guinea pigs are rather tiresome people including a sheriff and a poor cancer victim who was heaven bound, anyway. Director Nick Grinde carefully saves Hero Roger Pryor and Heroine Jo Ann Sayers for a highly unscientific fadeout clinch.

Dr. Karloff, in search of a cancer cure away back in 1930, evolves the recently touted refrigeration treatment. But heir Stanley Brown objects to his uncle being refrigerated. The big idea seems to be that if uncle is kept on ice too long, his assets go on ice, too, and that's absolutely no good to the heirs.

All Get the Freeze

In course of the argument Dr. Karloff, his patient, the heir, the prosecuting attorney and the sheriff all get frigidaired. Not until 1940 do Roger Pryor, also a doctor, and his fiancee, Jo Ann Sayers, start to find out what happened to Dr. Karloff and his party. They find a secret, cobwebbed door in Karloff's apparently abandoned cottage, descend deep into the earth and find all hands frozen as neatly as a box of strawberries at a chain grocery.

Dr. Pryor carefully defrosts Dr. Karloff and his unfriends. But Karloff's scientific fervor starts a-burning as hotly as if he hadn't been on ice for a decade. We'd never spoil the fun you'll get out of this thriller by telling you what happens, but we did get a special bang out of the district attorney's discovery that everyone is legally dead and subpoena immune.

Star Goes Sympathetic

Direction and acting are starchy and smart throughout, with Karloff in a rather more sympathetic role than usual, his bent for science being used straightforwardly as an excuse for his carelessness about individual lives. (P. S. To this critic "Man With Nine Lies" was essentially a mystery celluloid. The big mystery, unsolved, is why Roger Pryor is a leading man.)

The "Grouch Club" comedy is a honey, topping the rest of the shorts heavily in amusement value. There's also a Hal Le Roy short, in which Hal's poor feet have to work overtime to balance the poor taste and dragginess of other elements, and a neat color cartoon depicting the adventures of a burro and his mamma.

The newsreel keeps almost abreast of headlines fo the destruction of Namsos and President Roosevelt's demand for adequate protection for our country. MARY HARRIS.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 17 (INS).—The Marie Dressler role of "Tugboat Annie" has been given to Marjorie Rambeau—but don't get excited. Marjorie will make no attempt to be a "second Dressler." No one could possibly take the place of our beloved Marie and Marjorie is a good enough actress to stand on her own and create her own characterization. In the course of two years there have been 22 tests made for the Dressler role and I think M-G-M is wise indeed to select Marjorie.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Second surprise of the "Tugboat Annie" casting is that Alan Hale gets the part once created by Wally Beery and so it will be Marjorie and Alan in the new "Tugboat Annie Sails Again." Alan is a swell choice, too, for my money. Production on the Norman Reilly Raine story starts in two weeks and if it clicks you will be seeing Alan and Marjorie in a series of these yarns.

One of the best musicals I saw in New York was "Too Many Girls," which, surprisingly enough, has a real honest-to-goodness plot. RKO must think it is pretty good, too, because they're lining up a cast of pretty girls—Lucille Ball in the top spot; Frances Langford, who puts over songs like nobody else; Ann Miller, pretty little dancer, and Marie Wilson. George Abbott, who will produce and direct, saw Frances in the Lum 'N' Abner picture and he thought she was so all right he signed her pronto. What did I tell you about Frances? With this cast and the good music from the show this should be on the credit side for RKO.

I am very happy that I took time out of my busy day to attend the donors' luncheon at Ciro's on Wednesday for you couldn't hear Rabbi Magnin, Mary Pickford or Mrs. Ida Cummings without feeling the better for it. The luncheon was given by the Junior Auxiliary of the Jewish Home for the Aged and they are doing a wonderful work. There was no thought of race, creed or religion. Catholics, Jews and all denominations gathered in this common cause of humanity. Mary Pickford was presented with a scroll—the Tree of Life—for having obtained 600 members and the presentation and tribute paid her by Rabbi Magnin was beautiful. Mrs. Ida Cummings was given a locket for her fine work. Elsa Maxwell's speech was well worth remembering for its kindly humor and splendid philosophy. If Elsa ever wants to enter politics she would be valuable with her ready wit.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Paulette Goddard, who was greatly upset by her father's suit has gone to Mexico to forget it all; Nelson Eddy will have a minor nose operation next week; the James Stephenson baby, a boy, arrived at the Good Samaritan yesterday—papa is an English actor; that new ruby and topaz bracelet Barbara Stanwyck is wearing was given her by Bob Taylor on their first wedding anniversary; Basil Rathbone gained 12 pounds and you can imagine he is very happy over his new "figger." He and Ouida leave for Canada soon to visit Rodion who is in the Canadian Air Corps.

Ciro's looked like New Year's Eve after the preview of "Lillian Russell;" Harry Ritz, dancing and looking lovingly into Pat Dane's eyes. Greer Garson, luscious redhead and Benny Thau; Elsa Maxwell had a party for the Darryl Zanucks; the Jay Paleys entertained the Arthur Stebbins, Bob Ritchie and others; Mary Beth Hughes, a blonde cutie, danced every dance with one of our handsomest press lads; no one can resist Emil Coleman's music, which gets everyone on the floor at Ciro's; Dwight Fiske's fans have already spoken for reservations for tonight at Victor Hugo's; Priscilla Lane and Ken Murray, a surprising Brown Derby dinner twosome; Jean Feldman is back from New York and Charlie is happy again.

Phyllis Brooks has bought herself a raft of new clothes and is headed for New York; Cary Grant's heart throb is not Barbara Hutton, as some of the news services whispered, but a New York gal—socialite to whom he telephones every night; Ruth Foran (Mrs. Dick), who is one of Hollywood's real beauties, is leaving for New York. Too bad she and Dick couldn't get together; Patricia Ellis wearing a bandage on her hand to protect a very badly smashed finger, which caught in her car door.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Burnett Beats Bogart at Chevy Chase, 6 and 4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, May 17—Three weeks hence, Cleveland will be host to the National Open Golf championship and that brings up the name of Bill Burke. With characteristic home-townishness, the Cleveland gazettes are visioning him as the 1940 Open champion with a fine disregard for the fact that he will be one of the long shots when the field steps up to the first tee.

POVICH

But if knowledge of the course is, indeed, a potent factor, then Burke will be a chap to contend with. He calls every blade of grass by its first name on the Canterbury Club links. Burke is the pro at the Cleveland Country Club but he has forsaken those links the better to familiarize himself with the national Open layout.

It wouldn't be any new experience for Burke to win the Open, it must be stated. The rugged Polish lad, who dropped a half yard of consonants from the family name when he moved from Connecticut to take a caddy master's job in Florida in 1927, crashed through the Open field four years later.

He beat George Von Elm for the title in 1931 at Inverness in a tournament that ranks with the grandest of all open tourneys. It set a record for marathon play. He tied with Von Elm at the end of 72 holes, and they engaged in a 36-hole playoff. When they were still deadlocked at the end of that distance, tourney officials decreed another 36-hole playoff.

Burke's marathon duel with Von Elm was a fortunate climax to the tournament, Bobby Jones had gone into retirement the year before and without his presence the tourney threatened to be a financial flop. It was Von Elm, not Burke, however, who provided the chief sensations.

On the seventy-second hole of the tourney, Von Elm needed a birdie three to deadlock the match. His second shot on the 325-yard hole was 12 feet from the pin on a sloping, treacherous green, but Von Elm rammed the needed putt home. Von Elm came to the end of the first 36-hole play-off again needing a birdie three to keep the match alive. He got down a 15-foot putt this time.

It wasn't actually spectacular golf that Burke and Von Elm were shooting. The 299's they had at the end of the 72 holes were something like 13 strokes above the then existing record an Open tournament But in the second play-off Bur' inserted his best round of the tournament to win, a 71, te g to his clutch-shooting ability.

like Demaret and Heafner and Picard and Sarazen and Ru and Nelson and Guldahl will be the hot favorites in the l, but in Burke's favor is his stamina and his temperament. He is solid and powerful and big enough to withstand the grind and if he is not brilliant he is at least steady. Attesting to the fact that his game is sharp is his recent triumph in the Miami four-ball Open against the same company he will be meeting here in the Open.

A name that will doubtless command more respect in the 1940 tournament that ranks with the grandest of all Open tourneys. It has been eight years since the stocky little Italian has won an Open, but he has a talent for surprises. Ten years separated the two tournaments he did win, and this week in the Goodall round robin at New York his record 31 on the back nine is evidence that he is on his game.

Sarazen was never the one to take the winter tournaments seriously, even though he did win the Masters at Atlanta one year with his unforgettable brassie shot into the cup. "The winter tournaments," Sarazen would say, "mean little. The good golfer is the fellow who can beat the field on a real championship course in the North."

Back in 1922, Sarazen, who was scarcely out of caddy ranks, astonished the golfing world by winning the Open. He said at the time that he was 22 years old, but actually he was 20. He couldn't win another Open until 1932, but in that year he made golf history by winning both the British and the American.

At Sandwich, where he won the British Open, Sarazen bettered Bobby Jones' record of 285 for the event by two shots and then he hurried home for the American play.

The Open that year was a dog fight. In the last 36 holes, Bobby Cruickshank, the diminutive Scot who had been beaten by Jones in a play-off the year before fired rounds of 69 and 68. But they weren't good enough. Sarazen shot the last 18 in a blazing 32-34 and tied Chick Evans' Open record of 286.

We just thought we'd just mention this about a couple of guys who are trying for a come-back in the Open tournament—Sarazen and Bill Burke.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 17.—We were trudging along in the wake of the fancy Goodall round-robin tournament yesterday at Fresh Meadow, watching the beautifully groomed pros making their invariably flawless shots, when an old timer next to us hissed: "Those guys are nothing but a lot of dressed up paupers."

We asked him to explain.

"Most of them are in hock to the manufacturers who control the pro game. Y'see, they pay their own way here and there about the country—except when they go to the P. G. A.—and sometimes they don't get in the split-up of the purse and they're busted. I mean really busted . . . With not enough dough to eat on, even if they are all dolled up pretty.

CONSIDINE

"So what do they do? They hunt up their manufacturer, the firm whose stuff they plug, and get an advance. And pretty soon they're on the hook. Pretty soon they're so much in debt that the company owns them body and soul, and all the sport goes out of their game, most of these fellows you're watching are just salesmen. They're no longer athletes. Most of the tournaments have lost all identity as sports events, and have become just outlets for the companies to show their wares—by means of good pros. I'd bet not three of these 15 guys are having a good time . . . I mean the kind of time you'd expect to have when you're out for an afternoon of golf. I don't think that they get even the slightest thrill out of making those great shots they make. It's just business to them . . . Desperate business. For they know that if they didn't make good shots, they'd be sunk. They'd lose their borrowing power."

We asked him who was to blame for all that?

"The manufacturers," the veteran observer asserted. "In the old days, when the pros were independent and used any kind of equipment they wanted to use, a manufacturer would come around after one of them won an open and slip him $500 because the fellow happened to be using a certain kind of ball. So the pro would take the $500, go to the bar and throw a party for everybody within earshot.

"But then as time went on the manufacturers began to make sure that their equipment would be in the hands of winners. They began signing up the boys left and right. And when the sales of baseball equipment fell off, with the depression, golf became the backbone of sporting goods trade and the firms felt that they just had to be associated with the best golfers. I was out at Denver for the 1938 Open and a manufacturer—sensible fellow) too—told me that if one of his crop of players didn't win the tournament that the firm had wasted $50,000 subsidizing pros over a period of years—looking for a winner. Hoping for a return on the investment.

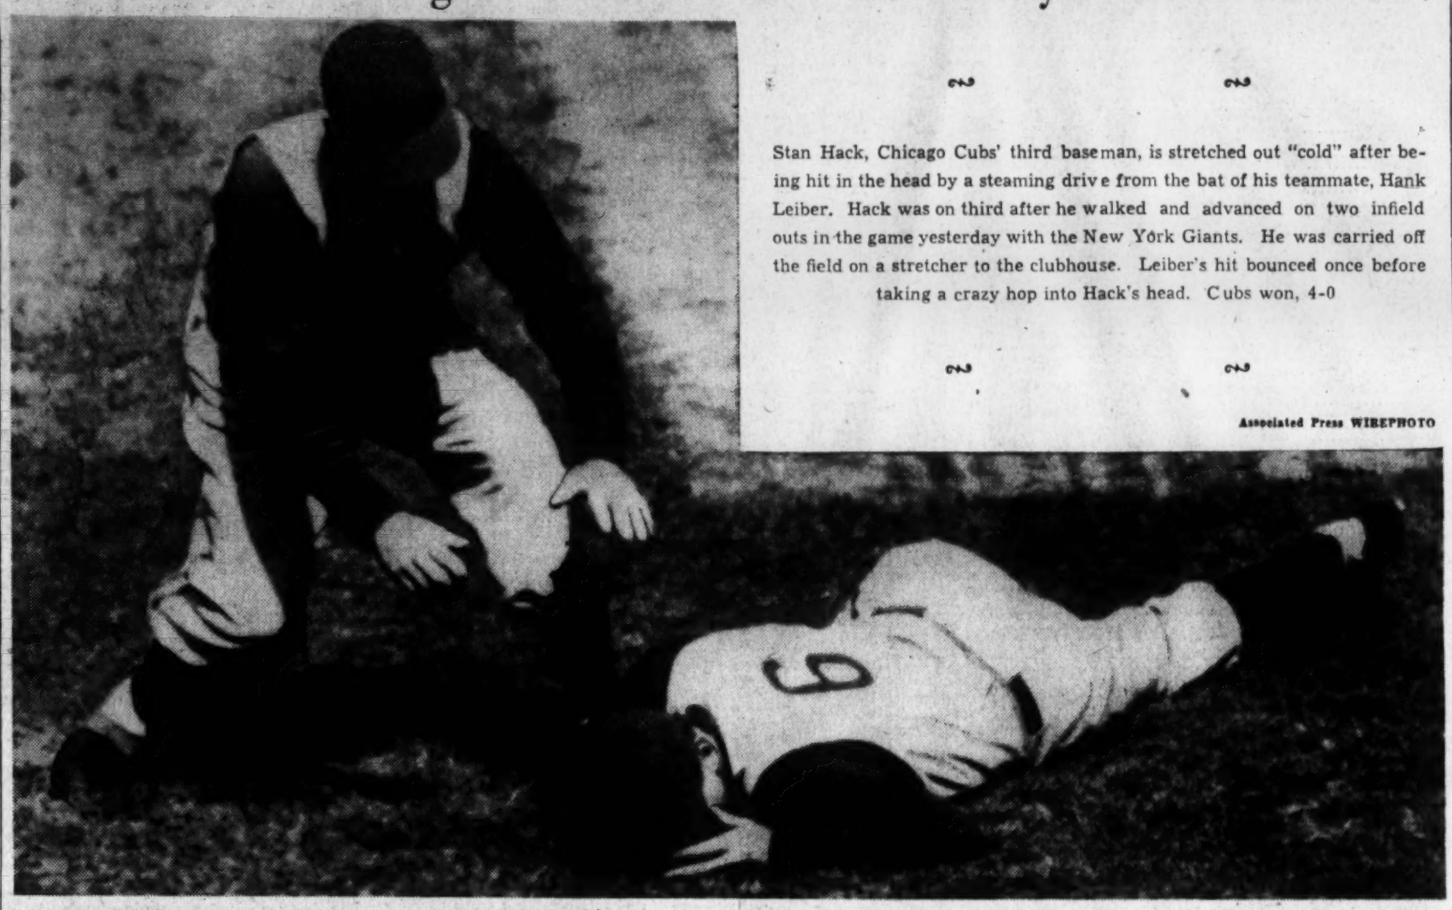
"Its become the biggest piece of competition in golf: finding an unknown, signing him up cheap, lending him enough money to keep him fed and on the tournament circuit, and hoping he'll come through. Two of the last four National Open champions were in hock to the manufacturers when they came through and won. One had been picked up after he had worked for a few days digging ditches instead of divots."

We said we thought it sounded like a benevolent sort of subsidy.

"Benevolent, my eye!" he said. "It's paternal, in a way, but it's hardly benevolent. It's like Mike Jacobs, keeping a fighter with a roof over his head and food in the stomach, on the understanding that the fighter fights only for him after that. Maybe that's all right too. Maybe professional sport is changing. But I'd like to see the old days come back. When Hagen . . . Sarazen . . . Armour . . . Alex Smith . . . And all those tough old pros used to get out there and really battle. They were for themselves . . . only. Nowadays, six topflight guys work for the same firm, four for another and so on, and it takes away all that fight and will-to-win. It takes away the sport of the thing.

"The tournaments are being affected. They're not spontaneous any more. They're not invented to improve the breed of golf as much as they're invented to sell something. For instance the big Los Angeles Open was bankrolled for a couple of years by the P. G. A., after the Los Angeles people gave it up. The P. G. A. tournament itself is peddled to anybody who's got $15,000. I think Elmer Ward's doing a smart thing in staging this Goodall. He's a business man, and while he's a lot less commercial than most of the other patrons of golf, he's still using golf as a means of subtly bringing his product to the public's attention."

Teammate's Bouncing Grounder Knocks Cubs' Stanley Hack Unconscious



Stan Hack, Chicago Cubs' third baseman, is stretched out "cold" after being hit in the head by a steaming drive from the bat of his teammate, Hank Leiber. Hack was on third after he walked and advanced on two infield outs in the game yesterday with the New York Giants. He was carried off the field on a stretcher to the clubhouse. Leiber's hit bounced once before taking a crazy hop into Hack's head. Cubs won, 4-0

Cleveland Takes 10 in First Inning Off Seven Walks; Charley Gelbert Makes Mound Debut Amid Confusion

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

With the Washington Expeditionary Forces Somewhere in Cleveland, May 17.—Playing like a bunch of (one word censored here), the Nats suffered reverses today and abandoned the first game of the series to the Cleveland Indians.

Before falling back to tomorrow's game, the Nats launched a counter-attack late in the day which dislodged the Indians from a run, but the ninth-inning rally fell 17 runs short of tying the score. Tonight, Cleveland is claiming an 18-1 victory, a report which the Nats have not yet denied.

The Washington pitching was (18 words censored here). Anything can happen in baseball, is the old maxim, and most of it happened to the Nats in the first inning. Ten Cleveland runs crossed the plate in the opening inning as the Indians staged a blitz-less blitzkrieg. The Indians' method of attack was a brisk walk. Washington pitchers (a question mark was censored here) issued seven bases on balls in that opening inning.

Nat Threat Fails

Fifth column activities cropped up as early as the fourth inning, when a player identified as Cecil Travis, disguised in a Washington uniform, dropped a pop fly and paved the way for two more Cleveland runs to cross the plate. Travis (eight words censored here).

Washington brought a secret weapo to bear in the sixth inning, but it was futile. Charley Gelbert, an infielder all his life until today, went to the mound for Washington

Rookie Breuer Hurls Yankees To Victory

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 17.—Looking something like world champions again, the New York Yankees accumulated six runs on six hits today to wallop the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 1, behind the five-hit hurling of Rookie Marvin Breuer.

The youngster who came up this spring from Kansas City held the Sox helpless and hitless for the first four innings and scoreless until the seventh, when two consecutive walks and a single by Marvin McNair gave Chicago its run.

The game had been won long before, however.

Mills Triples, Scores

Joe DiMaggio, who got into the champions' lineup for the first time last week, hit his first home run of the season with one on in the first inning. Red Rolfe had walked preceding the big blow into the lower leftfield seats.

Then in the fourth Tom Henrich raced to second when McNair booted his grounder, DiMaggio scratched a hit off Bob Kennedy's glove and Colonel (Buster) Mills tripled to the centerfield wall. Joe Gordon was hit by a pitched ball. Babe Dahlgren singled Mills home and Gordon scored from third on the next play, an infield out.

Too Much Relaxation

Breuer was able to relax after that, and relaxed a little too well. He gave up his first hit in the fifth and loaded the bases in the sixth on a walk and two singles, but a double play ended this threat. The Chicago score in the seventh came with none out, but the Yanks tightened up quickly.

Bill Dietrich, who relieved Lefty Ed Smith in the fifth, pitched two-hit shutout ball for Chicago in the last five frames.

It was the first American League game in five days for the Yankees, who ran into bad weather at the start of their Western tour, and the victory lifted them within half a game of the seventh-place White Sox.

Giants Held To 2 Hits; Lose, 4 to 0

By the Associated Press

New York, May 17.—Claude Passeau held the New York Giants to two singles, both by Joe Moore, in pitching a 4-to-0 shutout for the Chicago Cubs today.

But this superb performance which lifted the Cubs past New York into third place in the National League was clouded by an injury to Stan Hack, Chicago's star third baseman.

In the first inning after Hack had received a walk and advanced to third on two infield outs he was struck a glancing blow on the head by a ball batted by Teammate Hank Leiber. Carried from the field on a stretcher, Hack was taken to Polyclinic Hospital where an X-ray examination was to be made.

Dr. C. R. Palmer, the Giants' team physician, said he did not believe the injury was serious, although Hack bled profusely from a gash on the side of his head. Bill Rogell finished the game at third base for the Cubs.

Passeau did not allow a hit until the sixth inning, when Glen Russell stumbled trying to field Moore's grounder. The other single in the eighth was a clean belt.

Out-of-Town Horses Win at Meadowbrook

Local Exhibitors Take Back Seat In Opening of Washington Show; Lew Dunbar's Victory Is Feature

By Anne Hagner

Local exhibitors took a back seat yesterday at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club as out-of-town horses almost completely dominated the opening day of the Washington Horse Show, in Chevy Chase.

Major ribbons went to Mrs. Austin Jennings' Rascal, from Westport, Conn., who took the limit and lightweight hunter events; Nancy Marie Shaw's high-fencing Huntley Glen, who came from Chester Springs, Pa., to take the handicap jumping and the first phase of the three-day jumper event, and Dr. and Mrs. Walter T. Kees' New York-owned Lew Dunbar, winner of the knockdown-and-out.

Lew Dunbar's victory was the most-discussed of the day as the big 7-year-old jumped off three times with Fort Myer's Mount Carmel, ridden by Capt. James Quill. As the several hundred spectators cheered lustily, Lew Dunbar, with Bobbie Williams up, finally went clean over the stiff course of nine fences. The winner, who was loaned to the United States Olympic team for the contests in Finland until the war canceled such sporting events, was returned to the Kees' stable for the current show season.

C. M. Greer's Highland Ace, 4-year-old thoroughbred from Upperville, scored one of the few double victories of the day by winning the green hunters and hunters under saddle with his owner up.

Although yesterday's full day of classes was marked by numerous spills, only one turned out to be serious as young Frank (Happy) Christmas, 18-year-old District rider, fell with U. S. Randle's open jumper, Randle's Way, while schooling in a ring adjacent to the show grounds and suffered an injured shoulder. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where he was treated and released.

Ben Hogan Takes Lead In Goodall Golf

By the Associated Press

New York, May 17.—Though he fell down a flight of stairs last night and injured his back somewhat, young Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., still was able to put together a 68—73 over the exacting Fresh Meadow Country Club course today and take a comfortable lead over his 14 professional rivals in the Goodall Round Robin golf tournament.

With four more hard rounds of match play yet to be crowded into tomorrow and Sunday, Hogan tonight was 5 points ahead of his two closest pursuers, Paul Runyan and Jimmy Thomson. Hogan was breezing along with 12 "plus" points after three rounds, while Thomson and Runyan each owned 7 points. Thomson shot rounds of 76—71 today, Runyan 71—72, on a par-70 layout.

Hogan Picks Up 8 Points

A "point" is scored in this unique affair when a player finishes 1-up over an opponent. All matches go 18 holes. Hogan picked up a neat

Late Entry Wins 30th Annual Play

Beaver Dam Veteran Does the Impossible, Turns Back Peacock In Semifinal Round

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Volney Burnett won the thirtieth annual Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament yesterday, defeating Ralph Bogart in the finals, 6 and 4.

Here's how he did it: (1) He decided to play at the last minute and was admitted as a post entry. (2) He qualified for the championship flight in a playoff. (3) He received permission to take an extra day's leave at the last minute from the Fire Department. (4) He beat Roger Peacock in the semi-finals when every golfer in Washington said it couldn't be done. (5) He swamped Bogart in one of the greatest final rounds in tournament records.

Hits Top Form

The 31-year-old Beaver Dam shotmaker, a former Maryland State champion, played two of his finest rounds in defeating Peacock and Bogart. In the morning, against the "unbeatable Peacock" Volney went to work on the seventh hole after halving the first six, was four up at the eleventh and held half the lead for a 2-and-1 triumph, needing par for a 73 including three birdies.

In the afternoon he played his patented fade shot off the tee to perfection, arched iron shots that split the pin all the way and putted like a composite of Horton Smith and Bobby Jones to rout Bogart, the District Amateur champion from Congressional, with 1-under-par golf.

Bogart Hero

Bogart was the hero of the morning round. On the short end of the odds against Greensboro's Southern amateur champion, Bobby Dunkelberger, Ralph, a 20-year-old Wilson High student, was 1 down to his opponent of the same age at the fifteenth. He won that hole with a par, the next when Bobby was in the ditch off the tee and dropped a 7-foot pressure putt on the final hole for a 1-up triumph.

Bogart, second-flight winner two years ago, and first flight consolation winner last year, took the big jump to the finals this year, but he was outclassed. From the very first hole, where Burnett dropped a 20-footer for a par, after spraying his second shot, until the fourteenth, where Volney putted safely for a par and Ralph scrambled to a 5, the match was never in doubt.

Birdies Twice

Burnett's crouching stance and his smooth putting stroke told in the decisive victory. He needed only 20 putts for the 14 holes. His longest was the par putt on the first, but he came through with birdie putts on 10 and 12 of 8 and 10 feet, and made several other tricky one for pars.

The golfing fireman, and successor to Claude Rippy as champion, parred the first nine holes, birdied two of the next three and was over par for the first and only time on the thirteenth. There, he was short from the tee and chipped far short of the cup on the par 3.

Meanwhile Bogart was not playing bad golf, but it was no match for his opponent's. He hit a short putt on the fourth where the ball spun completely around the cup and stayed out, but he lost an average of one hole in three and couldn't win one back. He missed an 18-

Bullet B Takes Skyline Purse at Charles Town; Pays $16.80

Smart Ride By Walters Nets Victory

Winner Comes From Far Behind to Beat Out Nob; Bob Junior Takes Show Spoils

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 17.—The "war hunch" players batted .500 here today when they gave Goodbye Peace a heavy backing only to see the horse finish far back and then cashed a $16.80 mutuel on Bullet B. The victory of the latter came in the day's feature race, the Skyline Drive Purse, and was by a length margin under excellent riding by Jockey Chester Walters, the Eastern Shore boy who gave up crabbing for booting.

Walters was hit in the eye by a mud clot here yesterday and stayed up most of the night bathing the optic. He was rewarded with a winning jockey's fee, after he brought the 4-year-old gelding, owned by J. E. Crider, to the wire. Winning with Bullet B was something of an accomplishment, too, for the son of Canter now has won only two races in 37 tries.

Although the weather was beautiful to see, the track was holding, though drying, with Track Supt. Henry Erickson trying to help Mother Nature improve the oval in time for the week-end program. Bullet B was clocked in a slow 1:27 for the six-and-one-half-furlong course.

Bullet B. was one of the few winners on today's program to come from far back. He lacked speed going to the first turn and was forced to go wide for racing room. Ivonia and Nob battled for the lead in the early stages. Nob finally won this tussle and had all the earmarks of a winner entering the stretch. Walters had Bullet B. going strongly, however, and the gelding turned on the heat to win going away.

Nob lasted to be second, a length and a half in advance of Bob Junior. Yankee Lad and Dulie drew much of the wagering. The former showed nothing, and the latter, after trailing far back, rallied mildly through the stretch.

Jockey Tony Vesselli began the program with two straight winners. He brought Butterman home to an easy victory in the first race to gain backers of the colt a $7.80 mutuel. His second victory came in the first half of the daily double. He piloted Chief Hollis, a $13 shot, to victory. There was a $295.60 twin bet payoff when Lyde took down the third event at an individual mutuel of $23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTTERMAN, $7.80, $5.60, $3.80; QUATERNARY, $10.80, $5.40; TRAPSHOT, $4.40.

BUTTERMAN forged to front at once, saved ground while drawing out and was running easily at end. QUATERNARY, unable to keep up with BUTTERMAN in early stages, rallied when placed to drive and came gamely in closing test. TRAPSHOT went evenly, but could not threaten seriously. CUT EMERALD forced early pace and weakened in closing eighth. HABIT was held safe. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:10½. Off 3:11½. Winner, E. H. Titmus' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF HOLLIS, $13.00, $4.40, $3.40; HAPPY HOSTESS, $3.40, $3.00; DABS, $11.40.

CHIEF HOLLIS sent up on outside of HAPPY HOSTESS to take slight lead, withstood challenges and was drawing out gradually at end. HAPPY HOSTESS was rushed to front, but could not take lead while under hard riding and weakened in final test. DABS had good early speed and tired in stretch run. HAPPY HOST was held safe. MISS WING had keen early speed while racing on inside and dropped back. POLLY PAIR and NEVER HOME could not keep up. TWEETY was off very slowly.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:37½. Off 3:39½. Winner, J. E. Colvin's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LYDE, $23.00, $12.20, $9.20; KITTY'S RIVAL, $5.40, $3.80; LIMERICK, $5.20.

LYDE, sent to contention under hustling tactics going to first turn, took command on backstretch to open lead and held KITTY'S RIVAL safe in closing stages. KITTY'S RIVAL was hard ridden and had no excuses. LIMERICK, unable to get to front, held forward position throughout and was tiring at close. ARACHNE came willingly at end. VENDOR'S LIEN ran out entering backstretch and raced very wide thereafter. CHESSIE was held safe. CANROCK was taken up going to first turn while in close quarters and failed to rally.

Daily Double, CHIEF HOLLIS and LYDE, Paid $295.60

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Grand Waltz from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:04½. Off 4:06. Winner, R. A. Lowe's b. m. (5), by Mud—Lady Modish. Trained by E. Sweeney. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:28⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUCHESS DEL, $14.80, $7.40, $4.80; LADY CIREK, $7.20, $4.60; GRAND WALTZ, $3.60.

DUCHESS DEL, off well and within striking distance in opening quarter, disposed of MINY MO to take command and drew far out to win with speed in reserve. LADY CIREK, slow to begin, came to inside in final drive. GRAND WALTZ stood in gate at break, was kept to pressure throughout and closed gamely. GREEN WATER was held safe. SAIL BY had good speed for 3 furlongs and weakened while racing wide. GOODBYE PEACE was off slowly and failed to rally. MINY MO set good pace and stopped. NATION was through early.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:29½. Off 4:30. Winner, J. E. Crider's ch. a. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BULLET B, $16.80, $9.00, $6.20; NOB, $12.00, $7.20; BOB JUNIOR, $6.20.

BULLET B, allowed to settle into best stride and taken wide while battering position along backstretch, came around leaders entering stretch and won going away. NOB had keen speed to wear down IVONIA and take command, was kept to drive, but could not resist winner. BOB JUNIOR saved ground while close up, but hung in final test. HUPPY showed a good effort. DULIE was badly outrun in early stages and closed full of run. IVONIA set good early pace and stopped. YANKEE LAD had no excuses. LENA GIRL was through early.

SIXTH RACE (original substitute)—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate for all but Blind Talk. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:54½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLUM, $10.80, $6.40, $4.20; DANCING CLOUD, $7.40, $5.00; KISSIN KID, $3.80.

BELLUM, close up while racing on inside in early stages, saved much ground entering stretch and drew out in final 20 yards. DANCING CLOUD, slow to begin, worked way around horses and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. KISSIN KID came to outside entering stretch and hung in final drive. CHIEF EVERGREEN could not keep up early, and closed gamely between horses. JUSTA JIMMIE was used up setting pace and weakened. REMOLEE pressed pace and stopped. BLIND TALK came out of gate slowly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:21. Off 5:22½. Winner, J. Bosley's b. g. (4), by Mokatam—Margaret Burr. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 2:04⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARTIST, $10.80, $4.60, $4.20; BRIGHT CHANCE, $4.40, $3.40; BUBBLEWORTH, $4.40.

ARTIST, steadied along while close up for half, responded when placed to drive to take command and drew out to win easily. BRIGHT CHANCE lacked early speed and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. BUBBLEWORTH was hustled into lead at once, withstood bids of SEA FINN, but weakened when displaced. HEART PLAY closed gamely. SEA FINN was closest to pace for half and weakened gradually. PLAYDEMA had early speed and fell after finish.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:49. Off 5:49½. Winner, Blue Grass Farm's b. m. (6), by Boot to Boot—Tuza. Trained by W. L. Brock. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:53⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUGABOOT, $14.60, $6.80, $5.20; BLOX, $4.00, $4.00; LAKE SHORE, $12.00.

SUGABOOT, allowed to settle into best stride, improved position gradually on outside, wore down BLOX, but had to be kept to pressure. BLOX was in thick of contention from break, saved ground and closed gamely. LAKE SHORE gained gradually after opening quarter and showed good effort. BRIGHT SPIRITS could not keep up and was held safe throughout. BACKINTIME was hard ridden while forwardly placed and tired after taking brief lead. CREDENCE stopped. SPORT HEEL set and forced early pace and tired.

Bill Bennings

——At the Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

When the Benningites have something to say, I wish they wouldn't write it on postcards. For instance, here's one that came in today: "Bill—If that Hitler comes over here, I know how we can get even with him. Just give him your selections." Wonder what has become of those charming Martinsburg twins? Jockey Danny West, a pretty good boy, is plying his trade here before going West in July. Danny is the boy who was named as the rider for True Star, the surprise entry in this year's Kentucky Derby. "I knew True Star would be the longest shot in the Derby and all that, but I wish I could have ridden in the race." Danny has a younger brother who is learning the saddle trade and now works horses for E. W. Cook, trainer for the Bennings Stable. Sol Rosen, columnist for the Daily Racing Guide, writes that he saw the following sign on a barber shop door: "I cannot shave your faces, while I am attending the races, closed from 12 to 6." I forgot to report that following the storm here last Thursday, there was a brilliant rainoow with its ending right at the finish line. Of course, somebody got the pot of gold. Yesterday's workouts were of little use to the handicappers. The track was at its worst and the times were of mule variety. Spring must be here. Clocker Elmer Hathaway, who wears four overcoats, two topcoats and a raincoat in winter, is now down to one topcoat, and, despite the resignation of Chamberlain, Elmer hangs on to the umbrella. However, I expect he will have a Munich any day now. Confucius has been going so bad that somebody says he's down to the last three hairs in his beard. However, he still has some crumbs of his bank roll left. For today, he says: "I'm going to tap out on Royal Business. Bet me $8 to win. BILL.

First race—Roving Eye will like this abbreviated sprint route. Has worked well and needs only the right handling. Justa Canter will be at home in the going and is dangerous. Small Change for the minor award.

Second race—Notoriety packs plenty of speed and has about the company that suits. I see no reason for mistakes. Little Harpist will have light weight if taken off the reserve list and deserves attention. Tavern to show.

Third race—Windsor Chief gets none the best of it breaking from the inside rail. However, he has the speed and I'm forced to string along. Dunlad, formerly of the Bennings Stable, ran a good race in Florida and could come back to haunt me. Nugget had speed while setting the pace on the milers and is a threat.

Fourth race—Sun Voter gets my call in this field. Likes the route and is in good hands. Timetta has plenty of early foot and will have to be caught. Rough Buddy for the minor award.

Fifth race—Forced to go back to Royal Business in the day's feature, the Glenmore Handicap. The mare is as fit as hands make horses and lost last out only because of poor racing luck. Schley Goree was right there in that recent effort and belongs close. Walter Light downed the top pair last out, but today is another day.

Sixth race—Gino Thor was well thought of as a 2-year-old and was nominated for the Kentucky Derby. Deserves the top spot in this field. Din is good now and promises to be close. Schley Al for third position.

Seventh race—Erada, winner after trouble in that recent race, is the natural choice here. Spotless also had poor racing luck and won. Keswick Hill came from far back to win a shorter race and likes the route.

Eighth race—Extra Good failed to race up to expectations here earlier in the week. Has a Bowie race, if repeated, would bring a set of brackets. Sedate stumbled leaving the gate last out. Elbeesee to show.

Substitute race — Pandoramint, Trivet and Col. Hatfield is the way I prefer them if this event is used.

Best bet—Royal Business.

Goodman's Home Run In 11th Breaks Tie

Wyatt Hurls Flock To Victory Over Cards; Gives 7 Hits

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 17.—Making another try after getting batted out of the box in the first inning two days ago, Whitlow Wyatt pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 4-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today by scattering seven hits.

This was one more than the Dodgers collected off three St. Louis pitchers, but five of the Brooklyn hits were bunched in two frames. In the fourth Dixie Walker opened with a single, Babe Phelps followed with a home run and later in the same inning Dolph Camilli hit his fourth round tripper of the year.

The Cardinals opened with a run in the first on a walk, an infield out and Joe Medwick's single and scored their other runs in the fourth on a walk and Don Padgett's homer, his third.

This seemed adequate for Lon Warneke at the time, but Brooklyn lost no time tying the count and in the seventh pushed across the winning run on two singles and a long fly.

4-Ply Swat Comes With Bases Loaded To Bring Victory

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 17.—A grand slam by Ival Goodman—a homer with the bases full—kept the Cincinnati Reds in first place in the National League otday.

Goodman's blast over the right-field wall at Shibe Park came with two out in the eleventh inning and gave the Reds a 7-to-2 victory over the fifth place Phillies.

The circuit clout, Goodman's fourth of the season, came at a time when it appeared the Phils would pull out of danger without being scored on.

Mike McCormick, first up in the eleventh, doubled to center off Southpaw Lloyd Brown, who had relieved Walt Beck in the ninth for the Phils. After Ed Joost sacrificed McCormick to third Pinchhitter Ernie Lombardi and Bill Werber were purposely passed to fill the bases. Lonnie Frey hit to Art Mahan at first who got McCormick at the plate. Goodman then came through with the count one ball and no strikes. A walk to Frank McCormick and Johnny Rizzo's two-bagger produced the fifth run of the inning.

The Phils nicked Jim Turner for a run in the second on a base on balls to Morrie Arnovich, Bill Werber's error and Heinie Mueller's double. They added another in the sixth on four bases on balls and seemed headed for a shutout behind Beck's effective pitching.

In the eighth, however, Goodman singled with one out and Frank McCormick plastered an inside pitch into the leftfield stands to tie the score at 2-2 and force the game overtime.

24 Scholastic Squads Seeking Track Honors

With the team championship of the twenty-second annual "C" Club track meet at Central High their goal, 24 scholastic squads will converge on the Thirteenth and Clifton streets bowl today to participate in a program of 16 events starting at 1:30 p. m.

Numerous entries will come from as far away as Lancaster, Pa., to take part in the popular schoolboy event, but the defending titlist must come from only as far as Arlington, Va. It is Washington-Lee High, paced by the nimble-footed Wally Legg and his hardy teammate, Billy Carr.

With Legg in the 100-yard dash and hurdle events, and Carr taking care of the middle distances, the Little Generals are thought to have an excellent chance of repeating. Newport News is probably their strongest contender, with its ace hurler, Sam MacIntire. Considerable contention is also expected from a five-man squad from Greenbrier Military Academy.

Among the other schools represented are Bel Air High, with its Sterling Keyoe, brother of Maryland U.'s Jim; West Nottingham Academy with its ace high jumper, Alexander; the host school with Quarter-Miler Al Hayden; Tech High with Eddie Barham; Durham (N. C.) High, with Bob Gantt; Baltimore Poly, with a stellar mile relay squad; Staunton M. A.; Jefferson High, of Roanoke; Fork Union M. A.; Episcopal, of Alexandria; Forest Park, of Baltimore; Charlotte Hall M. A.; Mount St. Joseph's, of Baltimore; Hyattsville; Tome School, of Port Deposit, Md., and Franklin and Marshall, of Pennsylvania.

Activity will be in the usual 13 track and field events, with three instead of one relay listed. These will be over a half mile, a mile and a mile medley.

Navy Athletes Face a Busy Program Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., May 17.—Although the crews and the varsity lacrosse team will be in Philadelphia, Midshipmen athletes will nevertheless be busy with a program of seven contests at home.

The Adams Cup race will be the thirteenth annual renewal of that event and will bring together varsity groups of Harvard, Penn and Navy. Columbia will be an added starter, but ineligible for the trophy. Harvard, defending champion, has a veteran crew, and Navy folk feel the Crimson will be the one to beat. The Middies have a double incentive to win as the race gives them a chance to even the score with Columbia, who defeated them on the Severn three weeks ago.

The regatta will start with the freshman race at 5 o'clock, followed half an hour later by the jayvee crews, and in another half hour, the main event.

Heading the home card will be a baseball game with University of Pittsburgh at 1:45 p. m. The Middies also meet Pittsburgh in golf, starting at 1 o'clock. Other varsity contests will be an outdoor rifle match with the Quantico Marines at 2 p. m., and tennis with University of Pennsylvania at 2:30 p. m. The only varsity groups not in action will be the field and trackmen.

Morris Plan Wins

Morris Plan took a 13-12 softball victory over American Security & Trust yesterday in the Bankers League, Green's homer in the ninth accounting for the winning margin.

Terps' Murphy Bows in Upset In S. C. Dash

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., May 17.—Ernie Vail, Duke dash man, turned in the first upset of the eighteenth annual Southern Conference track meet today when he outran Joe Murphy, Maryland's defending champion, in the first heat of the 100-yard dash. His time was 9.9 seconds, a tenth of a second over the record.

Murphy, who had a bad start, finished second. Dick Little, South Carolina, won the second heat in 10.1. Lach, big Duke shotputter, led the qualifiers in that event with a heave of 46 feet, 8¼ inches; 120-yard high-hurdle heats were won by March and Mengel, both of North Carolina's 1939 team champions.

220-YARD LOW HURDLES: First heat—Won by March (North Carolina); second, Mengle (. C.); third, Maisch (W. and M.); time, 24 seconds flat. Second heat—Won by Callahan (W. and M.); second, Sargent (Duke); third, Walker (N. C.); time, 25 flat.

220-YARD DASH: First heat—Won by Murphy (Maryland); second, Deaderick (V. M. I.); time, 22.2 seconds. Second heat—Won by Curl (Washington and Lee); second, Little (South Carolina); time, 22.1 seconds. Third heat—Won by Vail (Duke); second, A. Miller (Maryland); time, 22.3 seconds.

880-YARD RUN: First heat—Won by Kehoe and Chonister (both, Maryland), tie; third, French (N. C.); fourth, Gordon (N. C.); time, 1:59.6. Second heat—Won by Morrison (North Carolina); second, Jones (Duke); third, Branch (North Carolina); fourth, Ochsenrieter (Maryland); time, 1:58.8.

Maryland Nine Defeated, 3-2, By Generals

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., May 17.—Washington and Lee closed its baseball season today with a 3-2 victory over Maryland, achieved behind the smooth mound work of Bob Gregerson and with the help of wildness on the part of Earl Springer, the Old Liners' hurling ace.

Although he gave up only two hits in five innings, Springer served up three costly wild pitches and a trio of walks to help the W. and L. opportunists.

Washington and Lee scored in the third without a base hit and twice in the fifth without hitting safely. Springer was removed in the sixth in favor of Hunt.

Gregerson had pitched 20 consecutive scoreless innings until Benegoechea drove a homer into leftfield with one aboard in the eighth to shatter hopes of a possible shutout.

Virginia Wins Big Six Title, Beating Spider

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., May 17.—Virginia's baseball team turned back the University of Richmond here today, 5 to 4, to win championship of Virginia "Big Six." In ten games this season, the Cavaliers lost only to Virginia Polytechnic Institute, after taking the first contest from the Gobblers at Blacksburg.

Today's victory was the second registered this season over Porter Vaughan, ace left-hander of the Spiders, who, it is said, will sign up with the Philadelphia Athletics at the close of the college term.

Bill Harman, converted backstop, who set down the Spiders two weeks ago, 2 to 1, was expected to go to the mound today for Virginia, but he had a sore arm and the twirling duties fell to John Willey.

Terps Risk Lacrosse Title Today at 3 P.M.

Host to Johns Hopkins At Byrd Stadium; 2,500 Fans Expected

A record crowd for lacrosse at Byrd Stadium is expected to be on hand at 3 this afternoon when Maryland risks its national intercollegiate title in a match with strong Johns Hopkins.

Bringing together powerful, evenly matched clubs, both undefeated in collegiate competition, the game is expected to draw many more than the record number of 2,500 fans, which attended the 1928 meeting of Navy and Maryland at the College Park Stadium.

Besides lacross today's college sports schedule lists only one other local attraction—baseball—at Griffith Stadium between George Washington and West Virginia. Frank McGinnis will get the pitching assignment for the Colonials.

A. A. PLAYS LOYOLA

Out-of-town activities will engage American University Gallaudet and Catholic University track teams in the annual Mason-Dixon Conference championships at Baltimore; the Georgetown track team at West Virginia, the Maryland trackmen in the Southern Conference championships, and the Maryland baseball nine at Virginia Military Institute.

In another meeting of Baltimore and District lacrosse rivals the Washington Athletic Association ten will travel to play Loyola, while the American University nine will invade Western Maryland.

RIVALRY EVEN

The Maryland-Hopkins match, besides settling the 1940 collegiate championship, will give the winner an edge in their long series. Since the rivalry was started in 1920 the foes have met 18 times and split even, Hopkins scoring a total of 88 goals to 84 for Maryland.

Though there seems little to choose between the teams, Hopkins has been established a slight favorite in some quarters because of its superiority in poundage and number of experienced reserves. A 12:30 preliminary to the lacrosse will pit the Frosh and Hagerstown nine.

The Georgetown-West Virginia track meet will mark the final appearance before the I. C. 4-A games of Al Blozis, the Hoyas' shotput and discus star, who is still conceded a fine chance of establishing a new outdoor recor for the shot.

Md. Freshmen Bow to Hoya Frosh, 7 to 5

Johnny Smith's lusty two-run triple in the eighth inning yesterday led the Georgetown freshman baseball team to a 7-5 victory over Maryland's hitherto undefeated frosh at College Park. The game was called at the end of the eighth by a pregame time agreement.

The defeat ended an unbeaten string of six games for the little Terrapins and also the three-game winning streak of Pitcher Bill Fulton. For Fulton it was a bitter defeat, as he allowed only eight hits and fanned nine. Two errors in the seventh inning led to an unearned Georgetown run which tied the score at 5-5.

Eddie Agnew who worked the last four innings after relieving Starter Dan Murphy in the fifth was the winning pitcher. Agnew, displaying a blazing fast ball, held the Terps to three hits and a single run in his stretch.

The Georgetown frosh were never behind after hopping on Fulton for three hits and as many runs in the opening inning before the slender Maryland star got warmed up. Maryland rallied for four runs in the fourth to take the lead, but Georgetown tied it up in the seventh on a two-base error by Maryland Second Baseman Walter Kuster and a wild throw by Catcher Kenny Bransdorf and then clinched the decision in the eighth.

Colored Baseballers Open Season Tomorrow

Though the local opening of the newly formed Colored Interstate Baseball League is still a week away, the league's two local contenders will travel tomorrow for openings elsewhere.

The Georgetown Athletics face the Edgewater Giants, of Baltimore, in a double-header and the D. C. Aztecs meet the Richmond Elks in a single game. The fifth team in the running is the Bellevue Grays, which remains idle.

Central, Eastern Take Interhigh Title Berths

'39 Finalists Beat Riders, Wilson To Clinch Play-off Places; Western Issues Indians Fourth Straight Setback

The same two clubs which tangled in the 1939 edition of the interhigh baseball finals—Central and Eastern—were the only ones certain of getting in this year's playoff following three series battles yesterday.

The defending champion Central nine, its berth already assured, made its position even more secure when it defeated Roosevelt, 6-5, at the Mount Pleasant bowl, and Eastern earned the other spot by trampling Wilson, 10-3, in Lincoln Park. Though it clung to third place by turning back Anacostia, 9-5, Western still needs a victory to clinch one of the four places in the final round robin.

Tide Scores 8 in 1st

Eastern rolled furiously over Wilson for eight runs in the first inning to take its victory.

Young Nino Briscuso, Wilson's starting pitcher, was the victim of the hosts' relentless first-inning attack. Five hits, including a pair of doubles by Billy Hite, two walks and an error all fused to present the Parkers with eight runs.

Eastern failed to do any heavy hitting after this scoring orgy but its lead was never threatened, thanks to the fine pitching of Kenny Deavers. Making his first interhigh start, Deavers pitched hitless ball for 6 1-3 innings and then granted three singles. He was taken out at the end of the seventh inning after striking out ten batters.

Billy Hite, with three hits in five trips to the plate, led the winners' attack while Wilson's four hits were divided equally. It was Eastern's eighth victory in nine games this season.

War Spread Clouds U. S. Trade Trend

Federal Bureau Cites Uncertainty Of Conflict Outcome

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday that extension of the war to the Low Countries had injected a new element of uncertainty into an otherwise favorable outlook for gradual improvement in domestic business conditions during the next few months.

Prior to the German invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands, the bureau said, the industrial prospect and demand for farm commodities definitely pointed to gradual improvement this summer.

Effects Are Outlined

"Since then the smashing German drive, which may settle the war one way or another within a shorter period of time than most people had expected, has added an element of uncertainty. Early termination of the war, or mounting indication that it may end within a year or less, would necessitate compiete reappraisal of the outlook.

The bureau said actual cessation of hostilities would affect the industrial situation in many fundamental ways.

"Anticipation of this by businessmen might so affect confidence, buying and inventory policies as to alter the trend of business activity during the next few months, even if these fears finally prove to be unwarranted.

Stimulation Possible

"However, since the final outcome of the new German drive may not be known for quite some time, and since the new vigor of the war will, in the interim, tend toward intensified Allied buying of industrial products from the United States, appraisal of the probable future trend of business conditions over the next few months remains essentially unchanged."

The bureau said that if the war turned into a more vigorously conducted see-saw conflict on a new front, the effects on United States business conditions during the remainder of 1940 might be definitely stimulating.

Canada Expects Newsprint Sales To Set a Record

Special Dispatch to The Post

Montreal, May 17.—Canadian newsprint shipments in 1940 may reach an all-time high and the Canadian pulp-making industry be operating at near capacity levels by the end of the year if the war continues on its present basis, according to the current quarterly issue of the Canadian Newsprint Review distributed by the Dominion Securities Corporation, Ltd.

After the Norwegian blitzkrieg, Scandinavian newsprint and pulp exports which amounted in 1939 to over 840,000 tons of newsprint and approximately 5,000,000 tons of pulp, were automatically eliminated, says the review. Canada and Newfoundland are the last remaining big producers of both commodities.

Competition from the manufacture of pulp and newsprint in the Southern sections of the United States is ahead for Canadian producers, the report states. Location of mills there is indicated because of the availability of adequate supplies of cheap wood. Power and fuel charges compare very favorably with those in the North and, where the producing plant is situated near a gas field or within short distance of crude oil or cheap coal supplies these costs are substantially lower.

"The Northern operators sooner or later will be forced to admit that Southern newsprint is a distinct and not too far away threat," the review said.

I. C. C. Authorizes Wabash Issue

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Wabash Railway yesterday to issue and sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at par $9,150,000 of 2½ per cent equipment trust certificates. The order supersedes an earlier one authorizing the Wabash to sell $9,300,000 of equipment trust certificates to the RFC. The Wabash will use $6,400,000 to pay off promissory notes held by the RFC, and $2,750,000 in repairing, rebuilding and modernizing 1,695 automobile boxcars.

RFC Sells N. Y. C. Issue

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation announced yesterday the sale of $9,000,000 New York Central 2½ per cent equipment trust certificates at 101 per cent of par plus interest, the price representing a profit of $90,000 to the RFC.

Rubber Buoyant

Akron, Ohio, May 17 (AP).—Rubber industry spokesmen, pointing out the proposed air armada of 50,000 planes would require between 150,000 and 200,000 tires, said today the industry would profit also from manufacture of rubber parts for ships, and de-icing equipment now standard on nearly every type of Army plane.

Peoples Drug Elects New Treasurer

William H. Churchill, formerly comptroller, has been elevated to the position of treasurer of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., to fill the vacancy caused by the death of George K. Shearer, the company's board of directors announced yesterday.

Carl Mitchell, director of candy and cigar sales, was elected to the board to fill the vacancy there caused by Mr. Shearer's death, and Carrel J. Riggall was named comptroller to succeed Mr. Churchill.

Mr. Churchill has been associated with Peoples since 1926. He is a member of the Board of Trade and past president of the National Association of Cost Accountants.

Mr. Riggall has been the company's auditor since 1928. He is a World War veteran and a member of the National Association of Cost Accountants.

Mr. Mitchell has been with the company since 1912. He is president of the Gold Craft Co. and is on the board of directors of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank. Mr. Mitchell is a member of the Kiwanis Club and the Congressional Country Club.

T. W. A. Establishes Mileage Record

An all-time record of 11,676,370 revenue passenger miles flown during a single month was established by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., during April, Jack Frye, president, announces.

Frye said the new high exceeded the total flown during the same month a year ago by 69.6 per cent, and that it topped the previous best month, October, 1939, by 677,939 passenger miles.

New Issues Gain Despite War's Fears

By the Associated Press

New York, May 17.—Public offerings of new securities increased this week in spite of the weakness of security prices caused by the latest German blitzkrieg, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

New offerings during the week ended yesterday totaled $89,440,468, compared with $15,776,000 the previous week and $13,379,023 a year ago. Only 8 per cent of the total, however, represented a demand for new capital, the remainder being for the purpose of refunding of existing debts.

Largest offering of the week was a United States Steel debenture issue for $75,000,000. The debentures were well received and syndicate managers said today that only $2,588,000 remained unsold.

Wheat Slumps As War News Halts Buying

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 17.—After a feeble show of stability, wheat prices today went into another tailspin that carried values down more than 5 cents a bushel at one stage, wiping out the gains scored yesterday.

News from Europe froze a weak buying movement almost before it could get under way, frightening owners of grain contracts and chilling would-be buyers.

May wheat fell to 86 and July to 84, the latter within ¾ of the low reached yesterday at the bottom of the week's 25-cent decline. Wheat closed 3½-5 cents lower than yesterday, May 86¾-½, July 84¾-½.

Corn was 1⅞-2½ lower, May 61⅛-¼, July 61-61⅛; oats ¾-1⅛ off; rye 2½-3⅝ down; soy beans ½-2 off and lard 3 lower to 2 higher.

Weather Helps Retail Trade To Move Higher

By the Associated Press

New York, May 17.—Retail trade volume moved up several notches this week aided by the general improvement in weather, Dun & Bradstreet said today in their trade review of the week.

"Reports of expanding retail volume came from all sections of the country," the review said. "Automotive supply, household and garden items, and sporting goods were particularly active. Lawn and porch furnishings and summer rugs were said to be having one of the best seasons on record in many cities.

"In men's and women's apparel, sportswear was outstanding. Food stores, which account for about one-quarter of total retail volume, reported increases in dollar sales averaging about 5 per cent over the corresponding period last year. Automobile dealers were maintaining gains of close to 45 per cent and apparel stores, many of which had been running under a year ago, showed an average advance of approximately 8 per cent.

"The estimated improvement in total retail sales was between 6 and 12 per cent over a year ago, largest since late in March when comparisons were distorted by the varying date of Easter.

"Wholesale trading activity held unchanged on the average, as a goodly flow of minor-sized orders continued to support volume. Hesitation was quite marked in cotton goods, particularly in the first part of the week, but as a rule there was no significant change in retailers' buying procedure."

U. S. Steel Plans Blast Furnace

Lorain, Ohio, May 17 (AP).—United States Steel Corporation has approved construction of a $1,500,000 blast furnace at the Lorain works of its subsidiary National Tube Co., officials said today. The furnace, with a daily capacity of 1,100 tons of pig iron, will be one of the largest in the country.

It will replace a 650-ton furnace built in 1904, which has been out of operation since February, due to its poor condition. The works has four other furnaces producing 800 tons a day.

Allied Credit Talk in U. S. Called Early

Rukeyser Argues They Have Cash, Resources on Hand

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
By International News Service

Congressional talk of changing the law to permit credits to the Allies seems premature, since they have not yet begun to exhaust their cash resources.

Before asking the American public and Congress to reverse itself on "cash and carry" and on the Johnson Act, other steps are open. The Allies can heighten their buying power in this country within the scope of the existing laws through catering to the national interests of this country.

In view of the growing recognition in this country of the urgency of strengthening national defense, the Allies can build up their dollar exchange in New York by encouraging our Government and our industries to build up our inventory of strategic raw materials, on which we are dependent on foreign sources, including the Malay Peninsula and the Dutch East Indies.

Such an approach would be acceptable in this country because, instead of imposing our own generosities and sympathies, it would provide us with a quid pro quo.

According to the Army and Navy Munitions Board, strategic materials are understood to include rubber, silk, tin, tungsten, nickel, manganese, quinine, antimony, chromuim, coconut shell char, Manila fiber, mercury, mica and quartz crystal.

In any circumstances, our position in the field of national defense will certainly be strengthened by an abnormally large inventory of basic raw materials which we lack and need. Moreover, such movements of commodities will help solve the problem of what to put in ships on their way over here in quest of war supplies.

Cotton Drops $8 to 23 Points, Buyers Halted

New York, May 17 (AP).—The cotton futures market plowed through feeble buying opposition today and dropped 8 to 23 points. After a briskly higher opening, due to steadiness at Bombay and Liverpool, gains soon evaporated when a sudden reaction in the English market put prices down the allowed limit.

Traders brushed aside all guide lines but war news and, with more and more pessimism surrounding the reports from abroad, little resistance developed to the steady trek downward.

Westinghouse Plans Plant Expansion

Mansfield, Ohio, May 17 (AP).—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. announced today a $500,000 expansion of its plant here. A new metal stamping building will be the principal project. The construction, aimed at increasing by a third the plant's output of household refrigerators, will start next month.

Lincoln-Zephyr

Detroit, May 17.—Competing against five other makes, Lincoln-Zephyr led its price class in sales in April in Wayne County, with 26.3 per cent, including metropolitan Detroit, the home of the motor car industry, it was announced today at the offices of the Ford Motor Co.

Allied Exchange Rate

Paris, May 17 (AP).—Exchange rates fixed after a triple financial accord among France, Britain and Belgium were announced today as 68 Belgian francs for 100 French francs and 120 Belgian francs for the British pound.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—Producers again held back shipments of hogs today and prices gained 5 to 15 cents. Cattle were steady on meager supplies and a few loads of best fed clipped lambs were held at steady prices.

Hog receipts in the open market totaled 7,000 or 1,000 less than advance estimates. Weights from 250 pounds down were 10 to 15 cents up and heavier weights around 5 to 10 cents higher. The market topped at $6.25.

Cattle receipts of 700 in the open market were 300 less than expected. No strictly choice steers were available, most selling from 8.75 to 9.85. Bidding on fat lambs were generally unevenly lower.

Scared Selling Sends List Into Slide; Liquidation Reaches Zenith in Last Hour; War Issues Lead Slump of 1 to 9 Points

New York, May 17.—Fresh outbreaks of scared selling swept the stock market today following reports of further Nazi military thrusts in France. The liquidation reached its zenith in the last hour when tickers ran as much as seven minutes late and turnover exceeded 1,100,000 shares, or more than a third of the day's total of 3,074,340 shares.

Pivotol stocks broke 1 to 9 points, including most of the aviation, steel and munitions issues which had risen so sharply on Thursday when the President disclosed his armament plans. At the finish, general price levels were at a low since April 11, 1939.

Sterling and French francs were weak but Swiss funds recovered in a nervous and erratic foreign exchange section. Commodity markets were subject to wide fluctuations.

At the outset of trading in stocks there were fractional gains resulting from transaction of buying orders placed late Thursday and on more confident expressions from Allied sources overnight.

Tone Is Nervous

The tone was nervous but price changes were mostly unimportant up to 11:15, when the tickers printed Nazi claims of deep penetration in the "little Maginot Line" defense, news that the Belgian government had moved from Brussels to Ostend, British admissions of the gravity of the situation on the Western Front, and new expectations of Mussolini joining Hitler. The selling which then developed and continued in successive waves of increasing intensity until the close bore the marks of emotional liquidation.

Curtiss-Wright, which led the list on the upside Thursday, was again the most active stock, giving up 1⅜ on turnover of 152,000 shares. Lockheed dropped 3¾ net; North American Aviation, 3⅛; Aviation Corporation, 1¼, and United Aircraft, 5⅛.

Reports of increased operations from the steel centers, advancing scrap prices and forecasts that new world markets would be opened to the United States by the war failed to aid steel shares. Steel common established a new low for the year just above 48 and closed on a net loss of 5⅜. Bethlehem, down $9 a share at one time, ended with a 7-point loss and Republic gave up 2½. Chrysler went to a new low and ended with a 7⅝ point loss and General Motors gave up 2⅛.

In the metal section, American Smelting common was off more than 3 and the preferred 7; Anaconda dropped 2⅜ and made a new low and Kennecott, also recording a new low, was down 3⅜ net.

DuPont lost 8, Douglas Aircraft 6⅞, Westinghouse Electric 6¾, Union Carbide 4¼, North American A, 3⅛, Allied Chemical 5, Monsanto 5, American Can 3¾ and Standard Oil of New Jersey, Loew's, Glenn Martin, Atchison and Great Northern preferred 2 or more points each.

Listed Bonds Weaken

Listed bonds weakened all along the line under the impact of the war news today. Best rated issues held rather well, under the leadership of United States Treasury securities. But foreign dollar issues again were marked lower. Almost all domestic speculative bonds followed the trend of the equities division. The market was orderly at all times and not especially active, turnover being less than $10,000,000.

It was the Treasury list that traders watched most closely today, since a real break in that section might cause havoc, but only small fractional losses occurred.

Belgian 7s dropped another 5 points in small trading. German bonds were in demand by those who speculate on the outcome of the war. French issues receded and new declines appeared in Canadian and Australian obligations. Norwegian bonds were stable, and Danish issues substantially higher.

Share privilege bonds that sell on their relationship to equities were hard hit in the domestic division.

Market Collapse Cancels Program To Raise 30 Million

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—Directors of Montgomery Ward & Co. today announced withdrawal of plans to raise more than $30,000,000 additional capital by sale of common stock to present shareholders.

The decision, they said in a letter to stockholders, was made because of "recent international events and their effect on the financial markets."

Early in April the company had announced that it planned to sell 772,910 shares at $40 a share. At that time Ward stock was quoted around $54. Since then the war has spread, Raymond H. Fogler resigned as president and other changes in executive personnel occurred. The sharp stock market decline earlier this week carried Montgomery Ward shares to a low of 38½, while the close yesterday was slightly under $40.

Chevy Chase Women Victors

Second Team Honors Are Clinched

Manor Wins in 3-Way Play for Third Team Honors in District Women's Competition

Chevy Chase clinched the second team championship of the Women's District Golf Association matches yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, while in a three-team race for the third team championship, Manor Club won by a single point.

The second teams have one more match to play, but Chevy Chase leads the second place Congressional team by 14½ points and there are only 9 points to a match. The third team matches were concluded yesterday with Manor defeating Congressional, 4-2, to win with 18 points to 17 for Congressional and as many for Army and Navy. The latter blanked Columbia, 6-0.

Members of the winning Manor team include Mrs. W. M. Baker and Mrs. H. A. Mihills, in the first bracket, and Mrs. J. H. Beech and Mrs. M. S. Platt, who swept three points in the second bracket for the victory.

Marion Brown's decision to forsake tournament golf for a position with Pepco will probably cost Manor the first team championship as the leaders lost to Congressional, 6½ to 5½ yesterday at Woodmont, losing 2½ points out of three in the first bracket. Chevy Chase picked up valuable points with a 12-0 victory over Columbia while Kenwood, with Mrs. Betty Meckley posting a 78, won over Argyle, 12-0, and Army and Navy defeated Washington, 7½ to 4½.

Know Your Dogs— No. 66 of a Series

—By George Berner

THE KEESHONDEN

Recognized as the national dog of Holland, the Keeshonden is neither a sporting nor working dog. The Dutch, however, claim he is the perfect companion dog and they have used him as such for several hundred years. He is undoubtedly related to the various huskies, the samoyede and the other Arctic dogs. They are about 18 inches at the shoulder and usually wolf gray in color inch putt for a win on the thirteenth.

Nolan Gets Consolation

M. Parker Nolan, whose qualifying 72 tied Peacock for second low, won the first-flight consolation, while Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam, bested a lot of good golfers in the second flight to finally win over George Miller, 3 and 1. Landra B. Platt saved a victory for the host club when he won the third flight over a clubmate, R. W. Fleming, jr. The 1918 Invitation champion, Robert Finkenstaedt, won the fourth and last flight over Max Taylor, Manor, by a 5-and-4 margin.

Southpaw Byrne Curtiss won the second flight consolation over Jim Huntt on the nineteenth, while Jim Gipe beat Earle Skinker in a "first-flight" match in the third consolation, 1 up, and Raleigh Reece, Asheville, N. C., won the fourth consolation.

Championship Flight

Volney G. Burnett (Beaver Dam), defeated Roger Peacock (Indian Spring), 2 and 1; Ralph Bogart (Army and Navy) defeated Bobby Dunkelberger (Greensboro, N. C.), 1 up.

Burnett defeated Bogart, 6 and 4.

Second Flight

George F. Miller (Columbia) defeated J. M. Proctor, jr. (Chevy Chase), 1 up; Eddie Bean (Beaver Dam) defeated Hickman Greene (New Orleans), 2 and 1.

Bean defeated Miller, 3 and 1.

Third Flight

L. B. Platt (Chevy Chase) defeated E. Heimer (Beaver Dam), 6 and 5; R. W. Fleming, jr., defeated Beverly Mason (Chevy Chase), 1 up.

Platt defeated Fleming, 2 and 1.

Fourth Flight

Max Taylor (Manor) defeated Tom Belshe (Congressional), 1 up; Robert L. Finkenstaedt (Columbia) defeated Dave Morris (Columbia), 2 and 1.

CONSOLATIONS

First flight—C. Purrear (Army and Navy) defeated Pete Scarla (Indian Spring), 3 and 1; M. Parker Nolan (Congressional) defeated T. T. Smith (Washington), 2 and 1.

Nolan defeated Purrear, 4 and 2.

Second flight—Byrne Curtiss (Indian Spring) defeated Dr. H. L. Smith (Congressional), 4 and 2; Jim Huntt (Indian Spring) defeated C. A. Fuller (Chevy Chase), 1 up.

Curtiss defeated Huntt, 1 up in 19 holes.

Third flight—Earle Skinker (Columbia) defeated Lt. Sweatingen (Columbia), 2 and 1; Jimmy Gipe (Beaver Dam) defeated J. M. Strait (Congressional), 2 and 1.

Gipe defeated Skinker, 1 up.

Fourth flight—E. C. Gott, jr. (Columbia) defeated Walter G. Emory (Chevy Chase), 1 up, 19 holes; Raleigh Reece (Asheville, N. C.) defeated W. R. Stone (Congressional), 7 and 5.

Reece defeated Gott, 4 and 2.

Maryland Netmen Defeat Georgetown

The University of Maryland tennis team dealt Georgetown a surprisingly one-sided 8-1 defeat yesterday in matches at the Hilltop, winning all the singles and two of three doubles.

Feature match was the No. 1 singles in which Allie Ritzenberg outlasted Don Martin in a torrid three-set encounter, 8—6, 2—6, 13—11.

Singles

Ritzenberg (M) defeated Martin, 8—6, 2—6, 13—11; Askin (M) defeated Owens, 6—0, 6—2; Phillips (M) defeated Riordan, 6—0, 6—2; Barkun (M) defeated Ritzer, 6—1, 6—0; Ragal (M) defeated Boyer, 5—7, 6—0, 6—3; Bengher (M) defeated Gelfand, 6—3, 6—0.

Doubles

Ritzenberg and Burbon (M) defeated Owens and Green, 6—3, 4—6, 6—0; Martin and Ritzer (G) defeated Harvey and Burnside, 4—6, 7—5, 6—0; Ragal and Bangaser (M) defeated Gelfand and Boyer, 6—1, 2—6, 6—1.

G. U. Game Canceled

The baseball game scheduled yesterday between Georgetown and West Virginia was canceled owing to the unplayable condition of the Hilltop field. Recent rains left the Hoyas' diamond covered with mud.

and pitched three more runs to the Indians. All that Gelbert had on the ball was (two words censored here).

Young Sid Hudson went to the firing line for the Nats at the outset and he was the answer to a batter's prayer. He walked the first three men to face him and the first man out in the inning was Hudson himself. By that time the Indians had fivt runs. Rene Monteagudo gave up five more runs before he negotiated the third out of the inning.

Against Al Milnar, left-handed grenadier of the Indians, the Nats achieved only a great deal of nothing until the ninth inning. The score at that point was 17-0, in favor of Cleveland. In the ninth, Gerald Walker doubled and Travis singled for the sixth and seventh Washington hits and its only run.

Here's How it Happened

Hudson walked Boudreau. Hudson walked Bell. Hudson walked Chapman. Trosky's grounder took a freak hop over Bonura's head for a single, scoring 2 runs. Hudson walked Heath. Hudson walked Keltner, a run scoring. Hudson took a walk and Monteagudo got the pitching job. Hemsley fouled out. Monteagudo walked Mack, forcing over the fourth run of the inning. Monteagudo struck out Milnar. Boudreau singled to center, scoring the fifth and sixth runs of the inning. Bell singled to center, scoring the seventh and eighth runs of the inning. Monteagudo walked Chapman. Trosky doubled off the right-field wall, scoring the ninth run of the inning. Heath singled to left, scoring the tenth run of the inning. Keltner, the (one word censored here), struck out.

In the second inning Joe Krakauskas got the pitching job and among his contributions was a home run he pitched to Jeff Heath. Gelbert got the job in the sixth and, one inning later, he pitched Heath's second homer of the day. Summed up, the Indians collected 15 hits for the day. As far as the Nats were concerned they (the next two sentences were censored).

N.B.A. Recognition Sought for Salica

Dallas, May 17 (AP).—Hymie Caplin, manager of Lou Salica, New York bantamweight, asked the National Boxing Association today to recognize Salica as world bantamweight champion.

Salica, recognized as champion by the New York Athletic Commission, was scheduled to fight George Pace, the N. B. A. king, for the undisputed title in Toronto on May 27.

Yesterday Tom Stanley, manager of the Cleveland Negro, said in Toronto that Pace "has run out on me," and Matchmaker Jack Allen added he would be forced to cancel the bout.

Allen said he had asked the Ontario Boxing Commission to suspend Pace and demanded that the N. B. A., with which the Ontario commission is affiliated, extend the suspension to all its member States.

Pepco Shutout

Treasury scored all the runs it needed for a 3-0 shutout in the first inning of its United States Government League game with Pepco yesterday. Both teams got four hits in the eight-inning game. Hudson scored two of the winning runs.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

To the person or persons who can discover any heroes among the Nats yesterday, The Post will award one small-scale blitzkrieg suitable for framing. We are awarding no points in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of yesterday's performances at Cleveland.

Cameo Defeats Grillmen, 3-2, In 10th Frame

Errors, Passes Help Furniture Nine to Eke Out Victory

Cameo Furniture nine bounced back into the victory column in The Washington Post Industrial Baseball League yesterday on the Ellipse when it pushed over a run in the tenth inning to beat O'Donnell's Grill, 3-2.

It took two Grill errors, a base on balls and a freakish play, on which O'Donnell's might have scored a double out, to give Cameo the victory. With the bases loaded, Second Baseman Bonifant juggled the ball, managed to make one putout, but was too late on his throw to first to retire "Giggles" Adair, the winning pitcher. McQuinn scored on the misplay with the final marker.

Despite its loss, O'Donnell's outhit the winners, 8-7. Kafka and Liggett held Cameo to seven hits, including Adair's double in the eighth. It was that blow, incidentally, which sent the game into an extra inning. Schwab and Harris racing across the plate.

total of 8 points in his blistering morning round, when he caught Craig Wood and Clayton Heafner off their games. But his lame back finally caught up with him in the afternoon and his 73 enabled him only to break even with Henry Picard, the P. G. A. champion, and Horton Smith.

In fourth place tonight with five points was Heafner, who shot 74—72 on his second and third rounds. Martin Pose, of Argentina, who is surprising the boys with all-around excellence of his game, burned the course with rounds of 70—71 to climb to fifth place with 4 points. He licked both Heafner and Jimmy Demaret, 1 up, in the afternoon.

The only others to own "plus" scores at this point were Dick Metz, 3, Gene Sarazen, 2 and Byron Nelson, the open king, 1. Horton Smith, the old boy wonder, was exactly even. Metz shot a brace of fine 72s today. Sarazen, coleader with Runyan at the end of the first round, had 75—74, and Nelson scored 73—72.

From that point on the boys strictly were "minus" and without much hope. In the awkward class were Jimmy Demaret, the tournament advance favorite; Henry Picard, P. G. A. champion; Sam Snead, Craig Wood, Lawson Little and Jimmy Hines.

Little was a handsome minus 15, at the foot of the class, though match play is supposed to be his joy and delight. Hines was minus 10, Wood minus 9, Snead and Picard each minus 3, and Demaret minus 1. Picard shot rounds of 72 and 74 today.

finesse, coaxing a cover from one adversary to make a true finesse against his partner on the way back. This sounds a little complicated but we have it on reliable authority that the play was used with success even before the doughty king of clubs lost his golden globe.

Be that as it may, it is still worth studying, for P. C., a fine player, used it with conspicuous success in a fast tournament game recently. Top score for winning two overtricks at three no trump was his reward.

The cards and the bidding are shown in today's box. East led his fourth-best heart which was the choice selected at most of the tables. This was taken by North's queen, and after pausing to review the situation he pulled out the old trick from his sleeve and proceeded to lead the diamond ten. East played a bit too fast and covered with the jack. Declarer put on dummy's ace, and the nine on the way back held the trick. The diamond king caught the queen, and the last two diamonds were ready to be led.

P. C. entered dummy with the ace of clubs took the remaining diamonds and cashed his top cards, conceding two tricks at the end.

North made three no trump with two over-tricks, winning five diamonds, two hearts, two spades and two clubs.

(15-Year FHA Plan)
These are in no sense summer homes, but all-year homes, built from standard specifications with the best of materials. They have oak floors laid over sub-flooring, red wood siding over diagonal laid sheathing, built-in tubs, fully plastered throughout, all windows screened and screened porch. They are identical to other all-year homes that we are building and selling at Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis.
Old Cedar Point is a beautiful development of large lots (55x120) with excellent views across the water. The houses are served with a public water system from deep artesian wells. The location is only a mile below new bridge across the Potomac. We selected this site for these homes because of its beautiful natural setting and its proximity to the Bridge. Follow Routes 5 and 3 through La Plata and turn right at Wayside.

Listen! with Slocum

The one missing link that has separated the Columbia Broadcasting system from perfection, admitting bias, has been the fact that radio's funniest man works for the opposition. Comes next October, however, and he will be one of our lads.

The name is Fred Allen and he will start a new show in October over CBS that will be heard in 88 cities, of which, I am pleased to report, the Nation's Capital will be one. Right now he is digging up his cast and when the show starts, under the sponsorship of the Texas Co., it should be a wow. It would be nice to have one-tenth of one per cent of the coin of the realm the Texas people are parting with to keep Mr. Allen in vegetables, staples and spending money.

It is a constant source of amazement to me that comedians are such dull folk off stage. It is slightly painful, I'll admit, how many of 'em can be dull on stage, but invariably they are glum, I'ed Sparkish citizens when not working. Of course Allen was what is known in the trade as a "sourpuss" but he is funnier in mufti than when at work.

The current show he is doing calls for about 20 minutes of rapid fire comedy without benefit of script. A nerve wracking business, Allen is alleged to dislike it intensely, but there can be no doubt that it is the funniest part of his broadcasts.

It is likely that Allen will build his new CBS show exactly as he pleases, which means it will go back to the formula he has used before this year. He will be on Wednesday nights for a full hour, starting at 9 o'clock. If we can lure just a couple more of the boys over on our team there will really be no further need for building radio sets with dials. Just set 'em at 1460 and let it go at that.

Orphans in Love

By Marion White

SYNOPSIS.

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children, but Peter won't declare his love for fear they will be poor. When a storm comes up while they are picnicking on the deserted Tucker mansion grounds one day, they get in the house where they see a picture of Peter Tucker, Revolutionary War hero, whom Peter resembles. Later Peter rescues three small boys from a tenement fire and his story, linked with the Tucker house, is read by wealthy John Abbott. Abbott fears his deception 25 years ago will be revealed and Cora, his wife, suggests he make friends with Peter. So he sends for the young man and offers him a job in his law office. There Peter also met Abbott's daughter, Millicent. He telephones Ellen to go out with him, for he wants to tell her the wonderful news.

Chapter 12

THEY WALKED toward the drive, to wait for a bus. Peter held his head proudly, surveying the world with the air of a man about to take first mortgage on it.

"Some day soon," he intimated optimistically, "we won't have to be waiting for this darn bus. I'll be getting a car." He added, as an afterthought: "Maybe."

Ellen paid no attention to the afterthought. "Then the job's a good one?" she asked eagerly. "More money than you're making now?"

"Fifty bucks a week." He announced it loftily.

"Fifty?" Ellen repeated incredulously. "Fifty?"

"Uh-huh."

"That's wonderful, Peter!" Three weeks ago he had expected to wait another ten years for such adequate remuneration.

Driving up in the bus, he told her more of John Abbott.

Successful

"He's the sort of man you read about, Ellen, and never expect to meet. Brilliant, successful, a millionaire two or three times over, I guess, and yet he's regular, too. He treated me fine. I can hardly believe it.

"Somtimes I just stand still and pinch myself, to make sure it isn't a dream that I'll awaken from. I'm almost afraid to go to sleep at night for fear that everything will be gone in the morning. Imagine, offering me a job like this the first time we met."

"Why shouldn't he? He'd heard enough about you. He knew he'd never find anyone better."

"Bosh! There are a thousand smarter fellows than me looking for jobs. Think what it means, Ellen, to be with a firm like Abbott & Carlton. Why, your future is practically assured. No starting out on your own in some dingy little office, praying for clients.

"No tying up with some shyster outfit for whatever they'll pay you. No handling of shoddy cases just because you need the money. A firm like that can pick and choose its clients."

"It's the very opportunity you needed, Peter."

"Opportunity, my eye. It was a miracle."

He told her about the office, knowing that she would appreciate its dignified appointments.

Fine Collection

The paneled reception room with its deep Persian rugs . . . the shelves of law books, a collection as fine as any library could offer . . . the small corner office which was to be his very own.

"You'd be crazy about it, Ellen. Talk about your river view—why, I can see every ship that enters the harbor, from Sandy Hook to Yonkers."

Presently she asked: "Did you meet the other partner, too? Mr. Carlton?"

He shook his head. "No. He's in Europe. But that's all right, Mr. Abbott said. Carlton is pretty old now. He doesn't pay much attention to the office. Anything Mr. Abbott does is all right with him."

It was shortly after 12 o'clock when they left the bus and walked through the woods that led to Tucker Hill.

Dry Leaves

The ground was heavy with dry leaves; as they stepped along their feet kicked them up with a noisy crackling which sent the squirrels scampering up into the trees.

"Now that it's practically certain you'll have a place like this," Ellen remarked brightly, "just think how much work you'll have raking up dead leaves every fall."

Peter grinned. "It's fun to make a bonfire."

When they came out in full view of the house, he stopped shortly, regarding it with a fresh appreciation.

"Gosh, Ellen, could you believe a few short weeks would make such a difference in a person's life? Last time we were here, there were only storm clouds overhead and nothing to look forward to. We didn't even know who Jonathan Tucker was. Now . . ."

He waved his hand elaborately; the gesture included the entire landscape, marked his own association with it. He was about to add: "Now he's one of my best friends."

An Obsession

But he didn't. The memory of Jonathan Tucker had served its purpose: there was no sense in pursuing the idealism until it became an obsession. Enough that a knowledge of the old man had introduced him to John Abbott.

He led Ellen over to a fallen tree-trunk cushioned with brown and yellow leaves. "Let's sit here a while and I'll tell you about the Tuckers."

"About the Tuckers?" She looked up in surprise.

"Yes. Didn't I tell you that Mr. Abbott was connected with the family?"

"I didn't understand . . ."

Amazing Story

He caught his breath. "Then I've neglected to tell you the most amazing part of the story. You see, Mr. Abbott read the story in the newspapers, it was the mention of Jonathan Tucker which interested him. Carver certainly overdid that, you know."

She didn't think so at all, but she did not argue the point. She was too curious to hear what Peter had to tell her.

"Mr. Abbott," he went on, "was the old man's attorney—old Jonathan Tucker, 3d. He has handled the estate ever since. He's been the one who has looked after the house all these years. He was the one who left the newspaper here last summer."

"Then there aren't any of the family left, Peter?" Disappointment quivered on her voice. "Didn't the old man have any children?"

"Just a grandson. From what Mr. Abbott said, they didn't hit it off very well. The young fellow would have nothing to do with the business. He went to Paris to study art, and that was a blow to the old man. Then they both died, within a week or so of each other."

Pleasant Dreams

"Oh." Ellen's face fell. All those pleasant young dreams about the eventual glorious homecoming were suddenly washed away.

The old Tucker House would never come to life again. It belonged to nobody, nobody at all . . .

She sat up abruptly, a question in her eyes. "Then why does Mr. Abbott keep the place? Why doesn't he sell it—or rent it?"

Peter shrugged, puzzled himself. "From the way he spoke, I gathered that he kept it as sort of a tradition. He was a very close friend, you see. He told me last night——"

"Last night?"

"Yes. I had dinner with him . . ."

"Dinner?" She wondered why he had not mentioned this before. Yesterday afternoon when he called her.

"Yes. It does sound as if I'm wearing out my welcome, doesn't it? But, as a matter of fact, he didn't invite me. It was his daughter."

Quick Lurch

Ellen's heart gave a quick lurch. She was glad that Peter was looking down at the leaves, fumbling with his foot, so that he did not see the flush she felt darkening her cheeks.

For no reason at all she felt strangely, stupidly unhappy, all of a sudden.

"I met her as I was leaving the office the other day. And she insisted that I must come to dinner, so that Mrs. Abbott could meet me, too."

To Be Continued.
